Small Plane Plunges Into Bay Follow- ing Struggle

PILOT GUARDED

Police Officials Say Pas- senger Intended to Take Own Life

Jersey City, N. J.—(P)—The death of Emanuel Eisenberg, 35, of New York, who was killed yesterday when a small training plane fell into New York bay following a mid-air struggle between passenger and pilot, was recorded by police today as "simply a case of suicide."

Police, however, placed a guard around the room of Pilot Joseph Rosemarin, 38, of Brooklyn, at the medical center, where he was under treatment for shock and submersion, after a fugitive-from-justice warrant was lodged against him by Staten Island, N. Y., authorities.

Eisenberg's body was found at low tide today in a pool near the Bayonne post terminal.

Police Inspector Henry Gaultier said the warrant contained a charge of felonious assault filed against the aviator by Joseph McKenny, assistant district attorney of Staten Island.

Sought Flying Lesson

Mortimer Rabson, New York attorney and a friend of Rosemarin, and a New York woman, made the identification. The pilot, an instructor for the standard flying school at Floyd Bennett airport in Brooklyn, said the man came to the field yesterday and asked for a flying lesson.

Rabson told police that Eisenberg, a New York press agent and theatrical writer, had resigned as press agent for the Group Theater in New York last year and went to Mexico to write a book. He said he had seen him recently in New York.

Miss Ruth Eisenberg informed police her cousin Emanuel had gone aloft with a pilot named Rosemarin.

Pilot's Story

From his hospital bed Rosemarin told Police Captain Fred Dwyer that his passenger became terror-stricken while flying over Brooklyn and "cleaned over and hit me over the head with pliers."

"I struck back and knocked him unconscious," the pilot said. "I was unable to control the plane and had to land."

Police Lieutenant William Curtin said Rosemarin told him that the passenger tried to jump out of the plane while it spun earthward.

After the plane hit the water, Rosemarin said he climbed out of the cabin and strapped the fuselage. He was rescued a few minutes later by the tug Osprey.

The captain of the lighter which raised the plane with a beam said he saw a body drop into the bay.

Code Enforcement for Beauty Shops Will be Effective Saturday

Milwaukee—(P)—The state will begin enforcement of its new trade practice code for beauty shops beginning tomorrow. Fred M. Wylie, examiner for the trade practice division of the state department of agriculture, announced today.

The code will go into effect in all Wisconsin cities of 5,000 population or more with the exception of Superior, Watertown, Ft. Atkinson and Marinette.

It sets up minimum charges for more than 30 beauty services, including $2.75 for permanent waves and 50 cents for haircuts.

The code has the support of the Wisconsin Hairdressers' and Cosmetologists' association, but is opposed by the Wisconsin Beauty Shop Owners' association. Miss Mildred Grossman, president of the latter, announced the association's 200 members had received instructions not to pay license fees to the trade practice division.

The division set up no code for Marinette because of a price situation there arising from its proximity to Menominee, Mich., where the division has no authority. Superior, Watertown and Ft. Atkinson also were excluded, Wylie said, because of "insufficient evidence of unfair practices" there.

Three Army Privates Sentenced for Holdup

Kalamazoo, Mich.—(P)—Three army privates from Ft. Brady, at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., were sentenced yesterday to prison terms for the $11 hitch-hike robbery of Pierre C. Allers, of Kalamazoo, March 5. Douglas W. Ebert, 21, New Orleans, was sentenced to five to ten years in circuit court and his companions, James A. Butler, 21, of Galveston, Texas, and John Sabala, 21, of Bay City, Mich., were given three to five years.

Gets Year for Stealing Gloves Worth $98 Cents

Waukegan—(P)—Austin Nejedlik, 41, of Green Bay, pleaded guilty before Municipal Judge Austin J. Bard today to a petty larceny charge in the theft of a 98-cent pair of gloves and was sentenced to a one year term in the state prison at Waupun.

Think Beating, Not Accident, Killed Indian

Autopsy Shows Peter Antone Was Struck by Blunt Object

CONTINUE PROBE

Man's Death First Believed to Have Been Caused by Car

The possibility that Peter Antone, 71, Oneida Indian whose body was found near Oneida last Sunday, was beaten to death, faced Outagamie county authorities today.

It was first believed that the man had been killed by an automobile, but the report of Dr. J. L. Ford, Green Bay pathologist, states that "because of the very few superficial abrasions, that is, because of the evident lack of marked external injury, it is scarcely possible that this man was struck by a car."

Raymond P. Dohr, district attorney, and Sheriff John Lappen said that the investigation in the man's death is being continued on the theory that he was involved in an altercation near the Al Manders tavern where his body was found lying in the yard off County Trunk E.

Seen at Tavern

It has been learned, Dohr said, that Antone was seen on the porch of the Manders tavern shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday morning. Manders reported that he heard the man outside the tavern after he closed for the night.

In regard to the victim's injuries, the pathologist's report stated that "because of the depressed fractures of the fifth, sixth and seventh ribs, because of the position of the fractured ribs and because of the ruptured liver, this man was struck by some blunt object immediately over a small area just to the right of the lower end of the breast bone."

The depressed area could correspond to the heel of a shoe or similar object. It is scarcely possible an auto could deliver a direct blow to the chest bone without causing any injuries to the legs and other portions of the body.

An inquest was called following the finding of the Indian's body about 6 o'clock Sunday morning by Manders, but no date has been set.

Income Tax Returns Expected To Determine Whether Added Revenue Will be Necessary

Oklahoma's Chief Gets Court Order

Temporary Writ Restrains Completion of Arch At Dam

Washington—(P)—Political leaders are looking to the federal income tax returns, due by midnight tonight, to influence important decisions about farm and defense spending, new taxation, and changing the federal debt limit.

While the administration set up no goal for this month's tax collections, the margin by which the receipts exceed the $505,000,000 collected last March is expected to be cited over and over in coming congressional debates. Unofficial guesses for the March total average about $550,000,000.

For instance, officials said, if the tax yield is plentiful, farm leaders can be expected to argue that the extra collections represent an unexpected treasury windfall which could be used for larger farm appropriations without impairing the budgetary outlook.

Similarly, proponents of greater defense spending could cite the availability of extra funds for their projects.

Help Avoid New Levy

At the same time, opponents of the $460,000,000 in new defense taxes proposed by President Roosevelt in January will find support if the collections are large. Congress has been cold to the tax proposal, but if the March total should prove disappointing, the lawmakers might be more receptive.

Overhauling all congressional debates on spending and economy in Roosevelt's week has been President Roosevelt's prediction that, unless appropriations were held to his January estimates and the new taxes were voted, the treasury would reach its $45,000,000,000 debt limitation during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Thus, if revenues should be larger than he expected, there might be room either for more spending or avoiding new taxes, or both.

8 Open New Fight To Keep Freedom

Get Order Restraining Clerk From Issuing Certificates of Conviction

Waukesha—(P)—Eight men convicted of conspiracy to violate the state gambling laws through operation of slot machines began a new fight today to avoid serving six-month sentences in the Milwaukee House of Correction.

The eight obtained an order from Court Commissioner Timothy J. Cronin of Oconomowoc restraining Clerk of Court S. D. Connell from issuing certificates of conviction or commitment which would carry into effect the sentences imposed in July, 1938, by Circuit Judge Sherman E. Smalley.

The order restrains the sheriff from interfering with the men's freedom.

Connell was ordered to appear in county court April 3 to show cause why he should not be enjoined from issuing such certificates.

The defendants—Garland Buckeye of Chenequa, A. Joseph Martin of Delafield, Otto Schroeder and Joseph Jacques of Waukesha, Paul Nowatski of New Berlin, Edward Woodruff of Pewaukee, Clarence Seider of Kaukauna and Herbert Voss of Sullivan—claim that the supreme court's order upholding their conviction was returned to the local court Feb. 1, 1939, and that therefore the time for their serving sentences expired July 31, 1939.

Four Persons Saved From Burning Home

Milwaukee—(P)—Rescuers broke in the front door to save four persons from being trapped while asleep in a two-story frame house destroyed by fire last night.

Florian Janka, his wife and their nine-month-old son, who live in the town of Greenfield, were rescued from a second floor bedroom and John Ward, 65, owner of the building, was assisted from a basement bedroom.

Half a dozen men who dashed from a tavern across the road when they saw the flames were unable to get a response when they shouted and pounded on the door. After breaking in and effecting the rescue, they helped carry out furnishings.

Allies Prepare to Intensify War on Economic Front

Finn Army Begins Withdrawal From New Soviet Lands

100,000 Dispossessed Civilians Move Out Ahead of Troops

Helsinki—(P)—The Finnish army slogged through the snows today in funeral retreat, beginning its withdrawal from the fronts it so stubbornly defended in the three and one-half months of war but which now are ceded to Soviet Russia.

Ahead of the soldiers there hurried 100,000 dispossessed civilians. They traveled by automobile, wagon and train or on foot, herding their livestock before them and carrying bundles that were the salvage of personal property.

These 100,000 bring to about 460,000 the number who must find new homes. A half-million persons already are refugees, but 140,000 of them are from battered territories which Finland retains and to which they will be able to return.

Reads Hold Positions

While the red army held its positions, marking time until Finnish troops have fallen back the required seven kilometers (about four and one-half miles) in one day, the Finnish withdrawal started at 10 a. m. along a zig-zag 226-mile front in the southeast, extending from the Virolahri archipelago on the Gulf of Finland to the Russian frontier in the north of Lake Ladoga.

These daily marches, on a schedule provided in connection with Tuesday's peace treaty, will continue until the newly-narrowed Finnish frontiers are crossed.

The entire Karelian isthmus and the area northeast of Lake Ladoga must be cleared by March 26. Withdrawal from other ceded areas north of Lieksa and in eastern Finland will begin at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

The garrison from Taipale, eastern end of the Mannerheim line, will have the longest march—about 100 kilometers (62 miles).

Vipuri First Goal

The hollow shell of Vipuri, once the metropolis of the Karelian isthmus, will be one of the first places to be occupied by the Russians, for they already are in its outskirts and may move up tonight as soon as the Finns have put several kilometers between them. (The Russian command had reported Vipuri was occupied five hours before hostilities ended at 11 a. m., March 13.)

Jho Koivisto, assistant minister of agriculture in charge of moving the homeless civilians, said they were not required to leave the ceded territories, but that practically all of them were leaving. About 2,000 persons are remaining, however, at Hanko, leased to Russia for a naval base.

Seven Dead and Seven Injured in Apartment Fire

Flames Spread Rapidly Through Building at Charlotte, N. C.

Bioff Ordered to Finish Jail Term

Chicago—(P)—William Bioff, west coast movie labor leader, today was ordered to the house of correction to complete a six-month sentence imposed 18 years ago for pandering.

Entering of the order, however, was delayed until March 25 to allow Bioff's attorneys to take the matter to the state supreme court.

The return to the Bridewell was ordered by Chief Justice John P. Stalski of the criminal court, who refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus by which Bioff sought to escape service of the term.

The issue in the case, Judge Stalski declared, is "Has the state a right after 17 years to enforce this judgment?" He said he had considered the evidence carefully and found he had no jurisdiction to release Bioff.

"This court has no pardoning power," Judge Stalski stated. "This is a matter of executive clemency."

Missouri Governor Raps Trade Barriers Imposed by States

Milwaukee—(P)—Governor Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri, here for the Wisconsin Chamber of Commerce business conference, said today that interstate trade barriers constitute the greatest menace to the United States, aside from the possibility of war.

"Free trade between the states is guaranteed by the constitution," he told interviewers, "but through various means trade is badly restricted by many if not all of the states against their sister states. Today the flow of commerce between the 48 states is so badly restricted that it has become a great menace to the greatest free trade area in the world—the United States itself. It is a menace to the welfare and future prosperity of the whole country."

Stark, chairman of the United States governors' conference and president of the council of state governments, said an effective fight is being made against trade barriers.

He will address the business conference banquet tonight.

Law Student Is Held After Attack on Woman

Madison—(P)—A 23 year old University of Wisconsin law student was held by police today on charges that he invaded a girl's rooming house on Lake street last night and slugged Miss Eleanor A. Kleinheinz, employee of the state department of agriculture.

Miss Kleinheinz told authorities she awakened when the student knocked over a telephone stand and tore the telephone box from the wall. She said she seized the intruder, but he struck her on the jaw and fled. The suspect was arrested on information she supplied.

Restrictions on Imports Not Permanent Trade Diversion, Britain Assures Washington

Washington—(P)—Great Britain declared today that her restrictions on imports of certain American products were solely war measures and "not in any way intended to cause a permanent diversion of trade."

The assertion was contained in a formal statement of British Ambassador Lord Lothian issued by the British embassy.

Secretary Hull, at his press conference a little later, said he was glad to be able to say that discussions were continuing with representatives of the British and French governments to safeguard American commercial interests.

Hull explained that total American exports to Great Britain, despite the restrictions on certain products, had greatly increased since the war started in September. Those to

Senate Considers Proposals to Help Finnish Republic

Pittman May Ask Congress for $1,000,000 Appropriation

Washington—A movement to advance funds for the rehabilitation of war-devastated Finland appeared today to be gaining ground in the senate.

Chairman Pittman (D-Neb.) of the senate relations committee said he was considering asking the senate to vote $1,000,000 for Finnish relief. The money would be spent through the Red Cross not only for amelioration of suffering but for reconstruction work.

He said the proposal might be linked with a bill by Senator Maloney (D-Conn.) to make $10,000,000 available for the relief of sufferers in Poland.

May Remit Payments Senator Norris (I-Neb.) suggested however, that this country might take effective action to aid Finland by remitting the $5,891,291 which it has repaid on its war debt.

While Senator LaFollette (R-Wis.) said he was opposed in principle to cancellation of government debts, he expressed opinion that the United States might well reconsider Finland's perfect record of having met all debt installments by offering to re-lend that amount at a low rate of interest.

Under instructions from President Roosevelt, the treasury already has earmarked for possible future aid to the Finns the $24,693 installment paid on Dec. 15.

His proposal was made to congress previously by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) during consideration of the bill—later enacted—authorizing the Export-Import bank to lend $20,000,000 to Finland and to advance funds to other countries.

NEW RED REPUBLIC? Moscow—The immediate organization of ceded Finnish territory into an autonomous Soviet socialist state republic was considered today to be the principal task of the supreme soviet of the U.S.S.R., convened for March 29.

The summons to the parliament coming three days after the peace treaty, led informed observers to predict that after formal ratification of the pact the supreme soviet would set speedily to establish communist rule in what the government newspaper Izvestia termed a former "anti-Soviet war base."

This reference to the Karelian isthmus, where Finland bore the brunt of the Russian assault, prompted one observation that war-torn Finnish land would be strategically split. The isthmus would be assimilated by the Leningrad military district, according to this view, and the remainder of the ceded territory, the northern shores of Lake Ladoga and eastern central Finland, would be incorporated into the existing Karelian Soviet republic, northeast of the isthmus itself.

Separate Republic? In the absence of official comment however, most observers predicted one separate republic would be created for the occupied areas.

In demanding concessions on the isthmus, pre-war negotiators for Moscow pointed out that Leningrad, less than thirty miles from the former Finnish frontier, was within artillery range of the Mannerheim line.

Leningrad, moreover, was the seat of the Finnish campaign.

In keeping with the policies of Nikolai Lenin, father of the Russian revolution, and Josef Stalin, his successor, the formation of a Soviet Republic in the ceded Finnish areas would promise local self-government and preserve the language and cultural institutions of the regions. The supreme soviet last met in November to incorporate into the U. S. S. R. western Ukraine and western White Russia, former Polish area.

Catlin Urges Experimental Work in Building Artificial Marshes as Refuges for Ducks

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)

Madison—Low-cost development of legions of small duck marshes by artificial means was outlined before the state conservation commission yesterday by Commissioner Mark S. Catlin of Appleton, who proposed that the state conservation department begin projects on an experimental basis to encourage volunteer action by sportsmen's groups.

H. W. McKenzie, director of the department, told the commission that the department's game management staff is already at work on a survey, and that demonstration projects may be begun this summer.

The plan as described by Catlin contemplates the drilling of post-holes close together on marshy lands and river bottoms and dynamite blasting in order to create small ponds. The artificially created depressions would then be developed through natural means by muskrats, and would immediately attract ducks in numbers, according to Catlin.

The Appleton commissioner asked that the department begin the work on a small scale this year, so that evidence of the results might be tabulated for the use of sportsmen's groups who could adopt the idea for their own conservation programs.

"The possibilities of such a plan are limitless. There are countless areas of presently worthless land in Wisconsin, in almost every county, which could be converted into lasting and valuable duck refuges at practically no expense," he observed.

He suggested the extensive acreages along the Wolf river in upper Outagamie county as a suitable experimental area, while the Navarino marsh in Shawano county, just north of the Outagamie line, was proposed by Commissioner R. H. Fischer of Shawano who congratulated Catlin on a "good idea."

Catlin said that the manufacturer of a well-known brand of ammunition and explosives would send agents to Wisconsin to conduct the blasting without cost, in order to open a new market for his product.

The commission also denied a petition signed by 1400 Manitowish county residents asking for permission to fish suckers with dip nets at night. The proposal was opposed by the state fisheries board on the ground that it would violate the uniformity in fishing regulations which now prevails in all other counties of this area. It was decided that a change may be considered next year, when other modifications of hunting and fishing laws will be considered.

Zimdars Named In New Warrant

Charged With Attempting To Obstruct Justice in Another Case

Mayville—(P)—Elmer P. Zimdars, disbarred Milwaukee attorney who is awaiting trial here on three charges of obtaining money under false pretenses, has been named in a new warrant charging him with attempting to obstruct justice in one of the cases.

Justice of the Peace Elmer Genzmer said that the latest warrant, issued yesterday by District Attorney Clarence Traeger, alleged that Zimdars offered money to Edwin Hartman, of Theresa, in an attempt to induce him not to testify at a preliminary hearing last Wednesday.

Hartman testified that he had paid Zimdars $500, in return for which Zimdars promised him a job in the state beverage tax division. Allegations of similar promises of jobs are involved in the other two previous cases.

In addition, Zimdars has been named in three warrants at Milwaukee alleging obtaining money under false pretenses.

Justice Genzmer said a hearing on the new charge probably would be held today or tomorrow.

Hunters Complain Over Neglect by Game Commission

Too Much Emphasis on Fisheries Program Catlin Tells Board

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)

Madison—Suggestions that the state conservation department's physical plant in northern Wisconsin is becoming "top-heavy" and that the fisheries program has been over-emphasized at the expense of other features of the general conservation program were made by members of the state conservation commission at a meeting here yesterday afternoon.

Commissioner Mark Catlin Sr. of Appleton, declaring that he wanted an opportunity at an early date to set forth his ideas on state conservation policy, observed that the department is building too many and that many sportsmen feel that the department has neglected the hunters for the fishermen in its activities.

Hunters Resentful

Most of the revenue of the department comes from hunters, he said, and many of them are resentful because of the emphasis given the artificial fish propagation program, and the expenditure of large amounts of the department's budget for that purpose.

Catlin's observations on the department's building program came during a discussion of a WPA project sponsored by the department for the construction of a 10 stall garage at the forestry headquarters at Spooner.

He foresaw a "terrible cost" resulting from the constant increases in buildings and facilities at various points throughout the state.

H. W. McKenzie, department director, countered with the assertion that "this is a wonderful opportunity to utilize federal money to take care of our needs. We need shelter for our machines, nets, motors, boats, and other equipment, and it is cheaper in the long run to shelter them than to allow them to depreciate in the weather."

Four State

It was indicated that a formal tour of the state conservation department's far-flung facilities and field organization may be undertaken as the result of Catlin's comments on the respective emphasis given various phases of the state's conservation program.

F. H. Fischer, Shawano member, remarked that most critics of the department's work "don't always see the department as a whole, or see that we're marching forward systematically and consistently."

Catlin retorted that he had some "vital ideas" to present to the commission on "this whole fisheries program," and "we'll have to listen to what the public has to say."

Commissioner Wally Adams of Conover representative of the heart of the state's lake fishing area, commented that some northerners feel that their game stocking needs are being neglected by the state department. Whole areas in the northern counties are barren of upland game birds, he said.

Opposition for Treasurer's Job

No Other Competition Thus Far Indicated At Seymour

Seymour—Nomination papers for city offices in the coming spring election are being circulated. The only opposition so far is for city treasurer, with F. E. Hopkins opposing Mrs. Mela Frank, incumbent. Other officers who will again run are: B. G. Dean, city clerk; A. J. Mill, assessor; C. Groendahl, mayor; I. A. Hansen, alderman for Second ward. Arnold Helling First ward alderman, whose term expires has not yet announced himself as a candidate. A justice of the peace for First ward also will be elected. No nomination papers for this office have yet been filed.

Members of the high school basketball squad with their coach, Paul Lofthaus and Roger Rusch, Smiley Nickodem were guests of the Kiwanis club at its meeting Tuesday evening. Mickey McCormick, coach of St. Norbert's college, was the guest speaker. Musical selections were given by the high school quartet and an obnoxious solo by Virgie Bunkelman. The program was in charge of the classification and membership committee, comprised of Walter Melchert, chairman, assisted by Michael Burns.

Seymour school will close next week for the annual Easter vacation.

Mayor C. Groendahl has requested all business places in Seymour to be closed during the hours of 1 to 3 o'clock the afternoon of Good Friday, March 22.

Herr Hitler Eyes Balkans and Moves Quickly to Capitalize On Soviet Peace With Finland

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(P)—Fuehrer Hitler is moving quickly to capitalize the smashing victory he won when he forced a Russo-Finnish peace, thus forestalling a probable but slowly developing Anglo-French intervention which would have opened up a new battle-front against him and caused havoc with his plans.

With that grave danger dismissed, he has started to repair his damaged economic Siegfried line in the Balkans, where allied gold and influence have been raising hob with his sources of supplies. He has been banking much on the products of this rich area to help him win the war.

The ink wasn't dry on the peace treaty before the Nazi chieftain was applying his blitzkrieg methods to the political situation. It is understood that he already has extracted from Russia a promise to keep hands off Rumania, no matter what happens in the Balkans. There are signs that this may further a non-aggression pact between the Soviet and Rumania.

Important Development

That is a development of prime importance. It is calculated to enable the Nazis to win Rumania away from the allies, which would represent another triumph for Hitler.

Naturally the Nazi leader's first thoughts were for Rumania. Not only is it the source of vast quantities of grain but of the only large supply of petroleum which he has thus far been able to tap.

One of Germany's most serious shortages is oil, without which modern war couldn't be fought any more than it could be waged without guns. Lately the Nazi supply from Rumania has been curtailed greatly, and the entire output has been in jeopardy.

The allies, whose nationals are the largest owners of the wells, have been using the big-stick on Rumania to prevent shipments to the reich. One line of pressure they are said to have used on King Carol was that they might reconsider their promise to assist him in event of invasion.

The Soviet is supposed to have had a long eye on her former province of Bessarabia which Rumania secured at the end of the World war. Carol has been maintaining a great army on the Soviet frontier for fear of an attack. Hence the importance of Hitler's move in obtaining the Russian promise to let the Rumanians alone.

Rumania already has started to demobilize agricultural workers from the army, and this is taken to be a response to the Nazi promise to protect the country from aggression in return for a real effort to meet the reich's need for supplies. It is estimated that farmers constitute about half of King Carol's big army at present.

Balkans Being Squeezed

Nazidom also is busy trying to win back the rest of the Balkans. These important states are in a most uncomfortable position, being squeezed between the Germans, who want to keep this great area open for supplies and the allies, who want to cut it off from the reich. The release of Russia from the Finnish war has made the Balkans even more wary of challenging Herr Hitler.

The cold fact is that the Balkans, while wanting allied gold and wishing to be free of German politico-economic control, are afraid of the armed might of Germany. Also they have to remember that when the war is over and the allies cease their war-stimulated purchases, the Balkans will revert to their old position of dependency on Germany for a market in which to sell their products. That's just a question of geography.

The Balkans figure that Germany will have a lot of troops available for movement in the spring. Thus they are proceeding on the basis that even if they have to sell to Herr Hitler on a barter trade basis, discretion may be the better part of valor.

In any event the Balkans aren't going to slam the door until they can gauge how this war is going. It will be interesting to see what the allies do, if anything, about opening up a new war front against Hitler in the Balkans, now that the chance to intervene in the Baltic has slipped away. It won't be very profitable for them if he is able to regain his prestige and flow of supplies in that area.

Chamber Denies Any Connection With Sale Of Furniture Polish

The Appleton Chamber of Commerce, through its secretary, Kenneth Corbett, today denied any connection with the telephone solicitation being conducted in Appleton to sell a furniture polish.

Corbett said the saleswomen, who are using the telephone to contact possible buyers, are claiming that the project is approved by the chamber of commerce. Corbett said the chamber has not approved the phone solicitation and never has approved that type of sales campaign operating under the guise of charity, Americanism or in conjunction with local organizations to aid their sales.

British Curb on American Shipping Termed 'Impudent' In World War 25 Years Ago

BY VIOLA HELLERMANN

The calmness with which the United States accepted the curtailment of its trade with Europe as a result of the present European war was not evident 25 years ago this month, when the country prepared a sharp protest to England regarding the latter's order to shut off all trade between the United States and the noncombatant population of Germany and Austria.

England's action was characterized by high officials in Washington as an "impudent assumption," a most flagrant violation of the principles of international law and a direct attack upon American trade "that could not be considered as anything but unfriendly."

The United States was having trouble also with Germany. The sinking of the American sailing vessel William P. Frye by the German Eitel Frederick had created what the papers called "an unprecedented situation." There was no fear of any warlike measures on the part of the United States, but President Wilson intended to insist on the rights of the United States being respected. It was believed that Germany would accept financial responsibility and do all it could to right the matter.

That the war might engulf still another country seemed imminent. Reports were persistent that Austria and Italy were nearing the breaking point.

Violent Fighting

Violent fighting continued on the western and on the eastern fronts. On March 10, 1915, France claimed that French troops, by two weeks of fierce attacks in the Champagne region, had lifted the pressure on the Russians and had saved Warsaw. The Germans, the report said, had been compelled to bring up heavy reinforcements to the western front. They had been unable to spare a single soldier for the Poland campaign, and Von Hindenburg, conducting that campaign, had begged in vain for reinforcements.

But reports from Berlin indicated no trouble in the Poland campaign. A German communication on March 11 declared, "A Russian force that attempted to break through the German line south of Augustof has been annihilated. In other sections of Poland the enemy has been defeated in a series of engagements."

Two days later Russia admitted that the Germans were again winning in striking distance of Przasnysz. Their outposts had advanced to within four miles of the city, it was announced.

German press dispatches from Poland on Monday, March 15, emphasized the magnitude of the victory gained by Von Hindenburg's left wing over the Russians who tried to pierce the German line near Augustof. Russian losses were heavy, the report said.

News from the western front was brief, but dispatches told of heavy fighting between the allies and the Germans in the Champagne and Artois regions.

Trouble in Near East
The allies were having more difficulty in the Near East than they had expected. The Turkish commander of Smyrna had refused a demand for surrender, forcing British Rear Admiral Hovell's squadron to resume shelling the port. An English landing party composed of from 1,000 to 2,000 men was repulsed in the Dardanelles and forced to retire to the warships. The Turkish forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles had received fresh supplies and ammunition.

During the second week of March, 1915, the German raider Dresden, not heard from since its disappearance after the naval battle off the Falkland islands early in December, also came into the news again. Confirmation of reports that she was again raiding British shipping was brought to the admiralty March 13, when it was reported that she had sunk the British bark Conway B. Castle 40 miles off Chile on Feb. 27.

On March 15, however, the British admiralty announced with a sigh of relief that the Dresden had been sunk. It came to its end off the Juan Fernandez islands, west of Valparaiso, Chile, on Sunday, March 14, when the British cruisers Glasgow, Orama and Kent trapped and closed in upon her.

Lenten Thought For Today

Friday, March 15. Behold the hour cometh, yea is now come, that ye shall be scattered . . . and shall leave me alone. Read John 16:25-33.

Loneliness may be a heart-breaking experience or it can be a school — though hard — of noble qualities. There are lessons we never learn save when we are thrown upon our own resources. "What a man can do in conjunction with others does not test the man. Tell us what he can do alone." "Character," said Moody, "is what a man does and is when he is alone."

Aloneness need not be loneliness. One may then share the great comradeships, populate his solitude with memories, discover himself anew. There is renewal in retreat from the clamor of the world, healing in quiet apartness from its foolish or strident voices. Only the hermit wants always to be alone, only the weak fear it, the brave and wise have often sought it and found in their solitude their mission, themselves and their God.

Prayer: Lord of our Comradeships and our Solitudes, we pray for the lonely in spirit or situation. Endue them with strength for their vigils, reveal to them the secret of access to their friends seen or unseen, and in the proffer of our own friendship may we answer their prayer. Teach us also the secret of being gladly alone, and in the quietness we cannot escape, give us the comfort of Thy presence. In Jesus' Name. Amen.

Singer, Bill Sommers, Roy Sommers, Dale Sauer and Jim Sauer, Scouts' dad's and troop committee-men who also attended the camp were George Hoffman, Laver Shauger, William Olson, Bernie May, Alec Petta, Joe Sauer, L. K. Forrest, Ray Mayne, John Lacy and Bernard Smith. "Dad" Pinkowsky of Clintonville and district committeeman, also accompanied the boys. George Hoffman and Laver Shauger proved to be efficient cooks at the camp. The Boy Scouts were supervised

Sophomore Debaters Are Participating in School Tournament

Sophomore debaters at Appleton High school are participating in their tournament to determine the best team in the high school. In the first round Oscar Boldt and Gunther Holtz, a negative squad, defeated James Pette and Robert Krueger, affirmative, 90 to 80.

The question which the students are studying is that of inter-scholastic athletics in the Fox River valley. Debaters are awarded points for argument, delivery and rebuttal. Winners will be selected by totaling these points. Edgar Hagene, social science instructor, and Herbert Simon, commercial instructor, are faculty sponsors.

In a second debate Robert Yohr and John Conway, debating for the affirmative, defeated Harland Seith and Lincoln Scheure of the negative, 90 to 77. Debates will be continued this week and after the spring vacation.

Miller Will Oppose Mack for Seat in Wisconsin Senate

Madison—Former State Senator A. M. Miller of Little Chute, Outagamie county Progressive committee chairman, will be a candidate for his old seat against Senator Mike

Mack of Shiocton this year. It was indicated here yesterday.

Senator Mack, a Republican who has represented the Outagamie-Shawano county district for eight years, recently announced his candidacy for reelection.

Miller is a farmer, a former assemblyman, Mack's predecessor in the state senate, and until a few months ago a member of the University of Wisconsin board of regents representing farmers. He lost the latter seat with the Heil administration's reorganization program which put into office a new board of regents. Lately ill, Miller appeared in good health here this week when he visited capital friends.

Nearly 1,000 Have Lost State Posts Under Heil Regime

Administration Spokesmen Hint More Dismissals are Coming

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau) Madison—The list of dismissals from the state service since the inauguration of Governor Heil is approaching 1,000, it was pointed out by administration spokesmen today, while more are coming, they hinted.

Most of the discharges have been necessitated by department heads, without explicit orders from the executive office, on account of the reduced departmental budgets under the appropriations for the present biennium. Large batches of others, however, were released from state service upon the specific recommendations of the governor's research bureau, including about 100 from the motor vehicle department, and about 60 this week from the highway commission staff.

Other layoffs were in the public welfare department, the tax commission, and scattered smaller departments. August Frey, director of the division of research, estimates that layoffs totaling 100 will result from the closing of four branch highway department offices.

Have Other Plans—Meanwhile it is expected that reorganization plans still to be announced in the state tax department, affecting the field offices of the property tax division, will mean more dismissals from that department's payroll, while there have been broad hints in the capital that Frey's current inquiry into the internal affairs of the state conservation department—with a payroll of about 1,000—may also result in curtailment there.

Other departments have failed to fill vacancies due to reduced budgets, while still others have delayed pay increases normally expected by state employees in order to remain within their limited finances.

It appeared doubtful, however, that the Heil administration, now in the fifteenth month of a 24-month term, will be able to attain its announced objective of a 2,500 reduction in the total of state em-

New York, Considered Key State of Coming Election, Found Leaning Democratic

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J.—Nearly all the political commentators believe that New York State is the key to the 1940 election—that whichever party can win this richest political prize in the union is almost certain to carry the nation.

With the largest number of electoral votes (47) and the largest voting population, New York is the subject of intense speculation in all political dope tables. It was a border-line state in the Dewey-Lehman election of 1938, when the Democrats squeezed through by a microscopic majority. What is the trend today? Which party leads in the race to capture the state that can make and break presidents?

Nine months ago studies of political sentiment by the Institute found the Republicans ahead in New York state. But with the outbreak of war in September, Roosevelt and the Democratic party shot upward in popularity throughout the country for a gain of 5 to 7 percentage points—a trend reflected in New York state. Special cross-section studies today show the Democrats holding the popular lead in the state, although the margin is small.

The survey question and results are as follows: "What party would you like to see win the presidential election this year?"

NEW YORK STATE VOTERS

Want Republicans to Win 47%

playes. When Governor Heil entered his office on Jan. 1 of last year, the bureau of personnel reported total employment at about 13,500. Thus far, despite heavy reductions in the number of jobs, there have been few pay cuts. Only salary reductions thus far ordered have been in the state teachers' colleges, where it was characterized as a "waiver."

the fact that while President Roosevelt carried the state in 1936 by 60 per cent, the Democratic majority today is slim. Democrats, on the other hand, can point to the fact that the Republicans have slipped in popularity since last summer in comparison with earlier Institute studies.

The last official test of party strength in New York state was the election of Judge Irving Lehman as Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals last November. Judge Lehman, the only candidate in the race, was endorsed by all three parties, Republican, Democratic and American Labor Party.

One commentator in writing about the election stated recently that the Republicans cast more votes than the Democrats and American Labor Party combined, and concluded that the G. O. P. is the strongest party today in this all-important key state.

But this conclusion failed to take into account one special factor in the counting of the ballots.

In 12 counties where a total of 462,365 ballots were cast, the vote was not counted by parties separately, but was recorded for all three major parties in a lump. These ballots were placed in the Republican column with an accompanying explanation. As a result the Republican vote appeared to be bigger than it actually was.

If the 462,365 votes are distributed between the parties on the basis of how other counties voted, the result would show the Republicans casting only 48 per cent as against 52 per cent for the Democrats and American-Labor party combined. In 1936 the American-Labor party endorsed Roosevelt.

The sharp political division which has been noted for years between

Three Postmaster Jobs to be Filled

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau) Washington—The civil service commission has set March 22 as the final date for receipt in Washington, of applications for admission to examinations for postmasters at Underhill, Navarino and Lyndhurst, all fourth class offices.

At Underhill, the vacancy is due to the retirement Jan. 31 of Postmaster Cornelius Serrier. Acting postmaster is Mrs. Mabel Janssen. Yearly compensation is $985.

At Navarino, Postmaster Oscar Onson also retired Jan. 31. Eugene J. Backes is acting postmaster. Compensation is $830 a year.

At Lyndhurst, Postmaster Frank Eich retired Jan. 31. Acting postmaster is Carl P. Wilson. Compensation is $440 a year.

update New York and New York City is reflected in the Institute's surveys. In New York City, 69 per cent of voters polled say they want to see victory for the Democrats and 31 per cent for the Republicans.

Outside the city the vote is 39 per cent for the Democrats, 61 per cent for the Republicans.

Hold Up School Aids Until General Fund Recuperates

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau) Madison—State officials today awaited an increase in the general fund balance before they would issue apportionments of common school aids normally payable in March, according to the office of Fred R. Zimmerman, secretary of state.

More than $5,000,000 in the annual appropriation for aid to elementary schools has been certified, and is being delayed, while it is determined that the treasury can withstand the drain. Before the aids will be paid, it has been announced, the treasury will honor an obligation of about an equal amount to the municipalities for road aids due March 1.

Paid on the basis of $250 for each elementary school teacher, with variations for larger schools, the aid is paid under the school equalization law, designed to level common school educational opportunities throughout the state without regard to local financial conditions. Schools in districts unable to support education adequately are allowed a special allocation of state funds.

Following are the amounts to be sent to the county treasurers in the northeastern Wisconsin area, who will disburse it in turn to the treasurers of the respective school districts, when state authorities decide that the treasury balance is sufficient to stand it:

County	Amount
Brown	$79,523
Calumet	23,359
Outagamie	82,539
Shawano	76,154
Waupaca	73,715

Body to be Exhumed In $15,000 Damage Suit Against Sheriff

Viroqua, Wis.—A $15,000 damage suit brought by Mrs. Edward C. Peterson against Sheriff John Hassler of Vernon county, claiming negligence in the death of her husband, has been postponed from March 26 pending exhumation of Peterson's body, it was disclosed Thursday.

Circuit Judge Robert S. Cowie signed an order to have Peterson's body exhumed, but a date has not been set yet. State toxicologists will conduct an autopsy.

Mrs. Peterson complained that Sheriff Hassler was negligent in the custody of her husband and claimed that he died of poisoning in the Vernon county jail on Jan. 18, 1939. In an adverse examination, Sheriff Hassler testified that Peterson, who was 55 and a Viroqua machine shop operator, was brought to the jail in an intoxicated condition. In his absence, Hassler said, Peterson asked a jail trusty to procure a drug from a drug store.

The complaint states that Peterson died soon after drinking the drug.

LA FOLLETTE ON "THE POLITICAL TYPE"

A colorful imagination is hardly necessary to conjure up the rich blessings in a democracy like ours were it practically possible to put in operation the advice ex-Governor LaFollette gave to Yale students recently.

Mr. LaFollette spoke of a certain type of politician who is in public service merely for private gain as "likely to be a silver-tongued, breast-beating demagogue preying on the unfortunate and the distressed with fast and fancy cures for all the ills which plague mankind," and balanced against this type the qualified men who could serve the public and capably but "remained fashionably aloof" from political affairs.

Few people will doubt but that the standards of public service have weakened noticeably in the past century but fewer, we fear, extend their examination into the prime causes that present us today with so many hysterical policies and more hysterical leaders.

The first trouble has regard to the compensation. It may be conceded that public men are sufficiently paid in most instances. But they are paid with gross inadequacy in comparison to the earnings of successful men in business, industry and the professions.

When Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, Grover Cleveland and William McKinley were seeking public positions that paid $5,000.00 a year private positions paid no more. And while congressional salaries have gone up to $10,000.00, comparable positions in private life are five to ten times as much even after paying income taxes.

A few years ago we came to a fork in the road. We could have adopted a policy limiting earnings but had we done so it would have been vital to adopt that policy's twin,—government economy. And so to the blare of many bands and the cheers of the Praetorian Guard we turned "a little left of center" and headed for the swamp.

What a glorious thing it would be today for America if the very top places in the commercial world paid no more than the salary of the President instead of from five to ten times as much. But of course, we would have to eliminate the present hoodlum arrangement whereby those who receive incomes out of all proportion to one man's worth whack up with the government for the privilege of thus taking the people's coin.

Another important matter in relation to public servants has to do with their fondness or distaste for the life. Men are born with characteristics, some timid and others bold, some patient and others restless, some happy, shouldering people in a crowd, others ill at ease under the same circumstances. That is why many men mentally and otherwise equipped for splendid public service would be unhappy under the rain of blows which is the common lot of the office holder, and steer shy of entering the fray.

Personality is a great factor in public life. In a democracy it is necessary that the public be attracted to the qualities of head and heart which they believe the incumbent has.

Some day we may come again to a fork in the road. And we may play to a better luck than we had last time. Instead of dreamily going "a little left of center" we will vigilantly take the other fork and go a "little right of sensible" and instead of finding ourselves in a swamp we will come out upon a fertile prairie. Then it will be established that men, excellently equipped to manage and direct, discover that public life pays as well as private endeavor.

WHERE IS THE PROGRAM?

There is included in the statutes of Wisconsin a requirement that in the fall of each year the Wisconsin highway commission shall draft a state highway construction program for the succeeding season. Thus the governor and the counties are informed in plenty of time of the state's exact plans for improvements on state trunk highways and new building during the ensuing season.

But here it is almost spring and we still have no notion whatever of the nature of the state highway program for 1940, except a strong suspicion that the program finally evolved will not amount to much.

We have reports that highway contractors are moving out of the state, convinced that the funds to be made available here will not be worth waiting for. We have rumors that there will probably be no building at all this summer, despite the fact that the highway commission's receipts are rising constantly, and this year will reach a total of $32,000,000 at the very least. But we are given nothing definite. The richest department of the state government, to which most of us pay taxes daily, at a time when its program should have been public information for months, has not yet divulged its plans, although execution is normally expected within a few weeks after the passing of winter.

The highway commission has an explanation, as this newspaper learned upon inquiry. The 1940 program was duly and legally drawn up last fall, it is said, but the governor soon afterward decided that he had to have $6,000,000 of the highway department's receipts to balance the state's regular budget. That necessitated redrafting and curtailing. The responsibility for the present delay and confusion thus apparently falls on the governor, and to him, then, we address the question: when will we know the nature of the 1940 program, if any?

EXPENSIVE ALTERNATIVE

Again we hear proposals to have the state absorb some of the bigger burdens now borne by the owners of general property and the contributors of the $110,000,000 total annually collected in Wisconsin from real estate taxation.

At least one man who describes himself as a candidate for governor recently broadcast an appeal that the state assume complete responsibility for financing the social security and direct relief program. Another who calls himself a "tentative" candidate agrees, and adds that the state must also assume a greater portion of the local property tax burden represented in the maintenance of the public school system of the state.

We wonder whether these gentlemen realize precisely the character of those proposals, and their implications. We wonder, for example, if they have ascertained that the old age pension beneficiaries in Wisconsin are now collecting well over a million dollars a month, and that 20 per cent of that total is paid by property taxpayers, and 30 per cent is already borne by the state. We wonder whether they realize that Wisconsin local governments last year footed a bill of almost $20,000,000 for social security and direct relief.

It is easy to say that the state should adopt the localities' burden. It is easy and pleasant to paint rosy pictures of the tremendous reduction in real estate taxation which could be accomplished in that way. But it is not so easy to visualize how that load can be absorbed by the state government which during the last year and a half has been stumbling around helplessly under the weight of its own present expenditure load, has been forced to adopt extra-legal expedients in order to maintain solvency in the treasurer's office.

Remember that a $20,000,000 increase in the state budget cannot mean anything except a $20,000,000 increase in state taxes, and more, for the state this year will accumulate an immense deficit brought about by spending more than it is able to collect. It means a 30 per cent boost in state expenditures, an increase of state taxes of more than $50,000 a day.

Remember also that the last legislature had plenty of opportunities to do exactly what is now proposed, and saw such suggestions accompanied by the inevitable drastic tax bills. Members of that legislature, responsive part of the time at least to the sentiments of their constituents, refused one tax bill after another, consented only to the cigaret levy when state bankruptcy threatened in spite of reduced expenditures.

These suggestions to have the state shoulder the load of the localities, to have the citizen pay out of a second pocket what he now reaches deep into the first to pay, are attractive. But we venture to predict that the legislature which will adopt them will not be elected in 1940, or for several years thereafter. The program if it is realized at all, must be advanced more slowly. It can hardly be denied that in most localities property tax relief is necessary. But the relief must be sought not alone in a shifting of the burden, but also in a reduction of that burden to the absolute minimum. For there is a limit to the state tax base, just as surely as there is for the local taxing power, and that limit is now not far distant.

FOR ELIZABETH MARY

Whenever I kiss the tight little curls
At the back of her baby head,
And hold in my arms the dearest of girls,
My heart feels comforted.

She climbs from my lap to her rocking horse,
And laughingly waving at me,
She rides along on the beautiful course
I hope her life will be!

Three are in heaven who love her as much
As we do who watch her at play;
Guardian angels, they lean down and touch
Our darling every day!

Blessing her, keeping her safe in their sight,
They make our dreams hopeful and sweet,
Shedding their love like a pathway of light
To guide her baby feet!

The DAILY WASHINGTON
MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Washington—Apropos of Senator Alben Barkley's offer to resign as Democratic floor leader, made in the heat of the Hatch bill fight, it has never leaked out that some time ago a plan to "boost" Barkley out of the leadership was secretly discussed at the White House.

Initiator of the plan was Democratic Elder Statesman Charles McNary, who called on the president shortly after the death of Justice Butler, while Roosevelt was pondering the appointment of Frank Murphy to take his place on the Supreme court.

McNary suggested that in solving his Supreme court problem the president might at the same time find a solution for the muddled leadership. He pointed out that Barkley had not been very good as senate leader, while Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina would be excellent.

But, Barkley had been a loyal friend of the president's, so McNary proposed that he be put on the Supreme court to fill the Butler vacancy. Then Byrnes could be the senate leader.

The president, however, pointed out that a considerable kick-back from Catholics could be expected if they saw Butler's place go to a non-Catholic. This was especially true in view of the fact that he had appointed Felix Frankfurter, a Jew, to replace Brandeis, also a Jew.

McNary said he thought the appointment of a Catholic to the Supreme court could wait until the next vacancy. He thought there was sure to be another vacancy.

But Roosevelt still felt the new Supreme court justice would have to be a Catholic. And that meant Frank Murphy. The only other Catholic candidate was John P. Devaney, former chief justice of the Minnesota Supreme court, and Justice Harold Stephens of the District of Columbia court of appeals. The former didn't want the appointment, and the president thought the latter didn't quite measure up to it.

So Frank Murphy went to the Supreme court and Alben Barkley remained in the senate.

EMPEROR JONES

Finnish Minister Procopio gave a luncheon the other day. A number of distinguished guests were present, all of them arriving promptly at the appointed hour of 1:15.

The lunch, however, was a little late in being served. The guests all appeared to be there, but nothing happened. Finally cocktails were passed, pink and insipid in appearance but carrying a powerful wallop.

Minister Procopio and his aides "skooled" and "skooled," until some of the guests began to be a bit dizzy.

One forty-five rolled around, and still no lunch. Finally at 2 o'clock, the minister made a little announcement.

"You see," he said, half apologizing, half smiling, "I am a very poor man, and I cannot have lunch without my banker."

At this point, in stepped Export-Import bank czar Jesse Jones.

ALL OR NOTHING

All hands may deny it, but it is a fact that both Taft and Vandenberg emissaries recently sounded out Dewey lieutenants on the proposition that he take second place on their tickets.

The answer that came back was short and emphatic—"No."

Dewey was represented as feeling that if he doesn't make the grade this year he is young enough to wait for another try, meanwhile building himself up by again running for Governor of New York. Therefore in the current race he has no intention of playing second fiddle to anyone. It's all or nothing with him.

Both the Taft and Vandenberg camps believe that, despite the New Yorker's lead in popular polls, he is steadily losing ground with the Republican leaders who will control the votes at the Philadelphia convention.

The Taft-Vandenberg strategy is to avoid any head-on collision with Dewey in states where his public popularity ensures his winning primaries. Instead they will urge untried delegates and secretly line up the local GOP chiefs, who privately are cold to Dewey and will go against him at the convention if they aren't tied up by a primary vote. Thus Taft and Vandenberg managers figure they can outmaneuver Dewey despite his greater popular strength.

TAFT IN THE MIDWEST

An illustration is Iowa, where Dewey has consistently topped polls, while Taft and Vandenberg have carefully sidestepped a showdown. Under cover they are busy wooing the Republican leaders who will have a big say in the state's delegation.

Taft lieutenants are particularly playing up to Hamford MacNider, Hoover Minister to Canada, who would like the lightning to strike him as the Iowa "favorite son" candidate. Though this is unlikely, MacNider has many friends, especially in the American Legion, and every little bit helps in a close fight.

Honeying up MacNider was one of the motives for Taft's second—and happier—try at the farm issue in Springfield, Ill. Springfield is only 80 miles from the Iowa line, within easy reach for the many Iowa party leaders invited to lunch with Taft. The speech was easily broadcast throughout Iowa, but technically, Taft was not barging into MacNider's home grounds.

If these seem to be fine points, they nevertheless count up in politics. More than one campaign has been lost because they were overlooked.

Note—Taft's speeches are a constant worry to his able press director, Forrest Davis. Taft writes them himself, is rarely finished until just before delivery, with the result that Davis is unable to get them to the press in advance.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

GOP strategy during the Hatch bill battle was matchless. Led by brainy Senator Charles McNary, the Republicans said nothing, let the Democrats do all the arguing, and voted for the measure as a bloc. When GOP Senator John Danaher of Connecticut started soaping out and offering amendments, he was quickly and forcefully silenced. . . . Theodore Metcalf, who as lieutenant governor of Nebraska started dishing out honorary titles of "Admiral of the Nebraska Navy," has tossed his hat into the ring for a seat in Congress. Metcalf wanted to try for the senate, but when serious competition developed switched to running for the house. . . . Politics have long been impressed by the way South Dakota State GOP Chairman J. D. Coon gets around to so many meetings. Now they are wondering if the fact that he has an identical twin brother doesn't explain the mystery. The two brothers live in duplex houses, are law partners and when at college kept each other's dates with girls.

A Bystander
In Washington

Washington—Notes of a newcomer: In the capital, that epidemic of Chinese colic, Confucious Say, is at its worst. . . . It took a literary taxi driver, warping thru sordid traffic in a downpour, to put Washington weather in a peanut shell. . . . claimed he was quoting Mark Twain: "If you don't like Washington weather, wait a minute."

Both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt have coats of tan that make the day-after-tomorrow look ancient. Secretary of State Hull is (at the moment) the most inaccessible of the cabinet members. . . . Postmaster Farley the most accessible.

There are two schools of thought here: (1) FDR will run again; (2) FDR won't run again. That provides the chief topic of conversation. The consensus seems to be this week that if the President doesn't run, the Democratic nominee will be Cordell Hull. Next week? I'll let you know.

Platinum Blonde

Today's history lesson: The best unknown landmark around town is the statue on the capitol dome. . . . 23 newsmen and congressmen attending a dinner at the Press Club the other night, guessed it was everything from Liberty to a forgotten chief of the Narragansetts. The right answer is Freedom. The figure, almost 20 feet tall, was done in 1857 by Thomas Crawford, father of novelist F. Marion Crawford, and mounted on the dome in 1863. The powers that be were about 70 years ahead of the times, too. Miss Freedom's a platinum blonde. The platinum is set on bronze-lightning protection.

When Summer Welles was skipping over the continent in the role of the state department's human question mark, he got close enough to the western front to see the boys in the Maginot and Siegfried lines doing their laundry. Wonder if he stopped to pun about "The wash on the Rhine."

Washington has one screwy street name I'll enter in a freak street contest with any city in the country. It's 131 street.

The House of Representatives has a bloc the Senate doesn't have. It's composed of city boys on one side, country boys on the other. That's because most legislative districts are either in the city or the country. There are times, too, when the division of interest that way overrides party lines. One thing they seem to be in perfect agreement on, though, is the quality of the house restaurant's bean soup. It's the best in the land (recipe requested) and I'll vote with the house any time they want to declare it so publicly.

Capital Crime

There's a battle going on now against a District of Columbia crime wave. Seems funny, doesn't it, there should be a crime wave in the city that houses national headquarters of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secret Service, the postoffice inspectors, the Department of Justice, and probably more private investigators than any other city in the world.

THE SACRIFICE

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—It can now be said, without giving away political secrets that Assemblyman Paul R. Alfonsi, for eight years a member of the legislature from Iron and Vilas counties and twice speaker of the lower house, is a candidate for governor on the Progressive ticket.

His announcement may be postponed as much as a month, but his campaign is already underway, with emphasis on tourists' businessmen, particularly the northern resort keepers, labor groups, and educational elements.

In reply to a query from this column, Alfonsi writes as follows on his plans for the campaign: "I want to be frank and state that I should be a candidate of this state will not have to read between lines to ascertain the meaning and intent of a legislative program."

"In order to alleviate taxes on real and personal property in the respective municipalities in the state it will be necessary to adopt a legislative program increasing elementary and high school aids; increasing road allotments to the municipalities (which means absolutely no diversion); increasing state participation in the financing of old age pensions, aid to dependent children, and blind pensions; acting quickly on a rehabilitation program for northern Wisconsin, and increasing appropriations for the purpose of advertising the state's recreational facilities."

STUNT

A new wrinkle in the state dairy advertising program is now being developed which in the opinion of state authorities gives promise of being the means for greatly strengthening the official dairy product program.

Gordon Crump, head of the dairy advertising division of the state department of agriculture, is now negotiating with representatives of several business organizations on a plan to connect their institutional advertising with the advertising of dairy produce.

It has been found, according to state officials, that the business volume curve of some businesses, emphasizing rural patronage varies in almost exact ratio to farm income. By using that fact, it is expected that such advertisers as telephone companies, banks, and others depending appreciably on rural trade can be persuaded to push dairy produce in their regular advertising space, and even, probably, increase that space for that purpose.

Robert H. Fischer, Shawano member of the state conservation commission, wants it known that he never entertained any idea of running for the state senate this year against veteran Mike Mack, Republican. Fischer, a Progressive, is one of the members of the commission who have thus far supported the administration of Chairman James Corcoran against the attacks of a minority composed of Mark Catlin of Appleton and Wally Adams of Conover. Since his candidacy for the senate, which has been rumored widely, would have necessitated a significant relation to the inside politics of the state conservation department.

ACETANILIDE ADDICTION

Chronic poisoning is a fairly frequent consequence of the indiscriminate use of various nostrums containing acetanilide (or phenacetine) orantipyrine or aminopyrine, all of which coaltar derivatives are virtually the same in effect.) The drug is the essential ingredient of a large number of headache powders or tablets, or "cold" tablets, migraine and neuralgia remedies, neuritis, rheumatism, fatigue, exhaustion, sea sickness, and what have you—it is immaterial what ails you, the effect of a dose of acetanilide is to lessen your consciousness of discomfort or distress. Hence the addiction.

An addict resorts to his favorite drug for the sake of the transitory "stimulation" he gets from it—not true stimulation, of course, not actual increase or improvement of function, but just an illusion as the victim of alcoholic intoxication experiences when he has absorbed enough alcohol to denumb his higher consciousness, his judgment, good sense and self-control.

Acetanilide gives that allusion to the individual who uses it frequently or constantly. But the drug really is depressant not only to the central nervous system but, what is most important, to the heart.

It is indeed odd, not to say ironical, that our Yankee law and custom sternly demands a poison label on the Middlewest, the Wisconsin Milk Pool, is about to resign. . . . Walter M. Singler, who headed the organization during those most militant days, is now farming in Texas. . . . A reader writes to dispute the inference in this column recently that the governor's salary is too low. . . . This column knows for a fact that whose name would be recognized by every reader of this dispatch, and who would be one of the most potent candidates his party could name this year, who says he won't run for governor, despite the impressive support which he can command, because he can't afford it on the salary the job now pays. . . .

the structure of iodine, with which it is difficult to kill yourself even if you try, yet he punily sanctions the indiscriminate sale of acetanilide in all sorts of nostrums purporting to be harmless, notwithstanding the many instances on record where chronic addicts have returned verdicts of death from acetanilide taken innocently in one or another of these dangerous nostrums. It is remarkable, too, how silent the medical and health authorities are today about this peril.

The characteristic symptoms produced by chronic acetanilide poisoning or addiction are fatigue, headache, anemia, loss of weight and a peculiar dusky bluish discoloration of the skin and lips and nails (called cyanosis). There is considerable quibbling in our present day "scientific" medical literature over the precise cause of this cyanosis, that is, whether it is due to methemoglobin or to a brownish discoloration of the blood by a decomposition product of the acetanilide. The important point is that acetanilide unquestionably causes progressive decrease in the number of red corpuscles and interferes with the vital oxygen-carrying function of the hemoglobin in the blood. To this anemia I attribute the grave undermining of physical and mental health in cases of acetanilide addiction, as well as the fatalities from a dose or a few doses of acetanilide in numerous recorded cases.

If I were to use any pain-killer at all for relief of headache I'd choose aspirin, any brand, or make available, as much less dangerous and injurious to health than the coaltar derivatives in any circumstance. Nor does it take the curse off from acetanilide, phenacetine, antipyrine or aminopyrine to mix it with a stimulant. There is no stimulant which antidotes these poisons.

Find Reason When Signal Is Ignored

BY ELY CULBERTSON

In expert partnerships signals are regarded almost as sacred things. So much trust does one partner have in the other that, when a command has been given, thru the medium of a high or a low follow-suit card, to continue a certain lead or to shift to another suit, in nine times out of ten will the command be blindly obeyed. This very fact builds up the strongest sort of implication that when the "tenth time" comes along and the signal is disregarded, there must be an excellent reason for the apparent stubbornness. Then it is simply a question of finding the reason.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 spade	2 diamonds
2 clubs	Pass	5 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's five spade bid was an obvious effort to reach a slam if his partner could control the ♣, adversely bid diamond suit. North read the message, but with two loving diamonds could not accept the invitation.

West opened the king of diamonds and East played the deuce. This was a subtle message that East could stand a shift of lead and therefore pointed directly to the holding of the heart king. From East's point of view this was correct play. West must easily hold a controlling honor in trumps, if that were so, dummy's side entry must be removed at once.

But West, knowing what the season and the reasoning back of the deuce of diamonds must be, and knowing that he himself did not have trump control, deliberately disregarded the signal and continued with a low diamond! East won with the queen and now was in doubt what to return. If West had failed to follow orders and had risked a trick to put East on lead (West could not know that East had the diamond queen), the only return he could make was a club. West must be void in that suit. East did, and West was, and the contract went down to defeat!

MARKING OF SILVER

The following letter reminds me somewhat of myself. It is said that I had been eating on some new plates several times a week, for almost two months when I wondered why we have never used them before. But this is the letter: "I had never noticed how silver was marked until I became engaged, and now I'm noticing everything. The other day at the table of a bride I noticed that her silver was marked in such a way as to look upside down to me as I sat in front of it. I inquired about this later in a jewelry store and they said this had always been the proper way to mark flat silver. Is this true? If it is, will you please explain why this is considered better than right side up?"

In answering this I have to say that you are wrong, because the bowl of the spoon, the prongs of the fork and the blade of the knife are the foot end of each and the handles the head. If the initials were put on the way you suggest, the effect would be that of a figure with a head on which the features of the face were upside-down. If you are a surrealist you may like this but most people don't.

Why a Second Marriage Ceremony?

Dear Mrs. Post: My daughter just told me that she and "John" have been married for six months. "John" is the boy we've known for many years. In fact, our families have always known each other. As one of us saw the ceremony, which was performed by a strange minister, we'd like to have another ceremony here at home and have our own clergyman perform it. May we send out announcements of the marriage, and if so, should the date of the other ceremony, or this new one, be used on them?

Answer: If they had been married by a magistrate, it would be understandable to have a religious ceremony now. But since they were married by a clergyman,

JOAN TETZEL, popular young radio star of Columbia Studio. She disciplines herself to be successful!

Possibly you have wondered about the actresses whose voices you hear over the radio. What do they look like? How do they train? Must they study voice? Are they young or old?

Well, today I am going to tell you about one young actress who plays the part of the happy child in the skit called "When the Girl Marries"—her name is Joan Tetzel. She has light brown hair, blue eyes, weighs 113 pounds and is five feet, six inches tall. She is nineteen years old.

Joan not only has definite acting ability but she has a sparkling personality which fascinates those who listen to her on the radio, and those who work with her in the studio. She has abundant vitality and unchanging good health — on which she prides herself as she should.

"Good health counts in acting," Joan explains, "for actresses who are weak or anemic always complain of poor memories, spells of dizziness, or headaches. I used to have headaches but I exercised and rested my eyes, as well as my body, and they disappeared. I believe very strongly in exercise—I get a lot of it."

Her Program

Joan disciplines herself. She takes a cool shower in the morning and walks a brisk mile, rain or shine. She refuses to stay out late nights, no matter how tempting the invitation. "It is not that I am a goody-goody," she explained laughingly, "but I must choose between good times and a career. Just now I'm choosing the career!"

Her favorite form of exercise is walking, but she rides horseback whenever she can to keep out-of-doors. Even though she is beautiful, there is little excuse for repeating the ceremony. This is a question, however, that your own clergyman should have the privilege of deciding. To give a reception in their honor will be entirely proper. The usual wording of the invitations would be:

Mr. and Mrs. Jones Brown request the pleasure of your company at a reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Wales Saturday evening, the fifteenth of April from eight to ten o'clock in honor of the marriage of their daughter Martha and Mr. John Wales Friday, the sixth of October one thousand nine hundred and thirty-nine Springfield, Ohio.

EASTER DINNER MENU

Easter dinner should be gay, and an occasion of real celebration for season when all the world and everything in it seems to take on new life and color. And so this year let's give some thought to our dinner and present it with a new "Easter Bonnet" in the form of this tasty appealing menu suggestion.

I chose baked ham for the main dish, however, if lamb is your choice don't forget mint jelly, and in place of the sweet potatoes serve new potatoes with chopped parsley. Whatever you may serve for the Easter dinner, there's only one way to bring it to fitting climax. And that is to serve an attractive dessert, a Sponge Cake Nest filled with Gelatin Easter Eggs. The children will love it and the grown-ups will enjoy it as well.

THE MENU

Halves of Grapefruit
Oven Baked Ham
Sweet Potato Bunnies
Celery
Radish Roses
Vegetable Platter
Hot Cross Buns
Easter Salad
Cheese Sticks
Sponge Cake Nest Filled with Gelatin Easter Eggs

Oven Baked Ham

1 whole ham Whole cloves
1 cup brown 1 cup pineapple sugar
2 tsp. flour or other fruit juice

Wash a whole or half cured ham. Place fat side up on rack in an uncovered roasting pan. Roast in a moderate oven 350 degrees F. until done. Allow 25 minutes per pound for a 10 to 12 pound ham, a larger ham requires 20 minutes per pound and half hams require 30 minutes per pound. About 45 minutes before ham is done, take from oven and carefully remove the rind, leaving a collar around shank bone. Cut diagonals across the fat to form diamonds. Moisten brown sugar and flour with some of the fat drippings and rub on the ham. Stick a clove in each diamond. Return to oven and continue baking 30 minutes, then increase heat to 400 degrees F. the last 15 minutes to brown the ham. Baste with pineapple or other fruit juice while making.

Sponge Cake for Easter Egg Nest

1 cup cake flour 3 tsp cold water
2 eggs
1 tsp salt 1 tsp baking powder
1 tsp vanilla
1 cup sugar

Sift flour once before measuring. Beat egg whites until they hold a point, adding the salt, baking powder and vanilla while beating. Beat egg yolks until light. Beat in the sugar with the rotary beater, then the water and flour alternately. Gently fold the egg white mixture into the egg yolk mixture. Pour into ungreased Mary Ann pan or a deep plain round pan, and bake 30 to 35 minutes, in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F. An 8-inch Mary Ann pan which makes a cake with a rim higher than the center to hold the filling is the best pan to use for this cake for the Easter Egg Nest. There will be enough batter left to make 4 or 5 cup cakes. If a Mary Ann cake pan is not available use a plain round pan deep enough to make a cake 2½ inches high. The plain round cake when cooled must be hollowed out on top, leaving an outer edge of rim about 1 inch wide. The hollow should be about one inch deep.

Gelatin Easter Eggs

Make a hole about as large as a lead pencil in small end of egg. With long needle mix yolk and white so they come out easily. Rinse shells with cold water. Fill eggshells with fruit gelatine of different colors using a funnel. Set the filled egg shells on end in egg container, custard cups or muffin cups and chill until gelatin is firm. When ready to serve break away egg shell and put the bright colored Easter Eggs in the nest of Sponge Cake. Pipe stiffly whipped cream, sweetened, and colored a pale green, around the edge and in between the eggs to make it look like an Easter nest.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Some of the best doctors and businessmen in this country have become soured on life and bankrupt just because they failed to guard the goose that lays the golden eggs. Every doctor, lawyer and life insurance salesman will be interested in this CASE RECORD.

CASE Q-111: Dennis J., aged 49, is an excellent dentist. "I graduated from dental school in 1914," he said, "and soon entered the army. On my return in 1919 I started a practice in Philadelphia, but after a few years decided there was a better future in New York City, so pulled up stakes and moved.

"For 15 years I had a very profitable practice in New York. Then my father grew feeble and wanted us to come back to my home city of 15,000 population. My wife's parents lived there, too, so we finally were persuaded to make the change.

"But, Dr. Crane, my practice in this smaller city is hardly any better than it was three years before they opened my office. I have the choice location and probably the best equipped office in town. What's wrong?"

DIAGNOSIS:

Success which depends upon individual sales or clients, is usually a cumulative affair. The first few years are difficult ones, whether you start out as a lawyer or a dentist, a physician or life insurance salesman.

You have to build up a practice or clientele. A successful life insurance salesman may sell 30 percent of his yearly volume of insurance at his previous clients—but not till he has been in business for at least 10 years.

Obviously, that "repeat" business is easier to sell. In a similar manner, it has been estimated that a

Children Must be Taught to Fulfill Their Agreements

BY ANGELO PATRI

"Ma, listen. I promised to work for twenty cents an hour for Mr. Shells, delivering, and now Mrs. Shrimp offered me twenty-five for working for her. So I want to work for her."

"What?"

"Somebody'll have to tell Mr. Shells that I can't go over."

"Not necessarily."

"Huh?"

"Not necessarily."

"But he'll expect me."

"Why shouldn't he? You said you'd go, didn't you?"

"Oh, well, he only offered me twenty and I can get twenty-five."

"You didn't say anything about that to Mr. Shells. You said you'd work for twenty. So that's what you do."

"You mean I gotta work for Mr. Shells for nothing?"

"Don't try any red herrings. Twenty cents an hour is not nothing. It's twenty cents an hour and a contract is a contract and you keep it. If your word is no good, you're worth the same."

"Have I got to work for him?"

"No. You have to go to him and tell him that you aren't a man of your word, that you can be bought for a nickel and after that you are free to do as you please."

"Gee, ma, you're awful tough."

"So's a contract. Listen to me, son. I'd rather have you work twice as hard for nothing at all if it was a choice between that and breaking your word. Once you give it you stick to it. That's more important to you than your earnings in cash. I don't want to own a boy who breaks his given word."

When children are young and inexperienced they meet these difficulties. What they learn by meeting them is going to affect their characters for a lifetime. The child who learns that he keeps a bad bargain because he agreed to it learns to be careful about the next one. By taking his own responsibility in these matters he gathers wisdom and understanding. The usual boy rarely

Generally Safe to Judge Young Girl by Her Mother

BY DOROTHY DIX

A young man asks me if it is safe to judge a young girl by her mother. Generally speaking, yes. Ninety-five times out of a hundred the best tip that a youth can get on a maiden is to size up her mother and study her past performances. The way Mother looks at 50 is pretty likely to be the way Mabel will look at middle age. The kind of a housekeeper Mother is, is more than likely to be the way that Mabel will keep house. Mother's point of view is about the way that Mabel will look at things. For you see, son, Mabel is the result of both heredity and environment, and the chances are that Mother has not only bequeathed to her daughter her own beauty or homeliness, and her own brains or stupidity, but she has formed the girl's character and the ideals that will make her code of conduct as long as she lives. Of course, every man knows that he is going to make over his wife according to his own taste and he never doubts, when he marries a young girl, that she will be as plastic as dough in his hands. But before he is through with his honeymoon he has found out his error. He has discovered that Mother had been on the job some eighteen or twenty years before him and that, strive as he will, he cannot undo her work.

Therefore, son, I should like a very long and careful look at Mother before I popped the question to Mabel, for the old adage, "like mother, like daughter," is only too likely to be true. If Mother, for instance, is one of those ladies who habitually deceive their husbands about the bills and all family matters, and whose favorite motto is, "What a man doesn't know, doesn't hurt him," I should leave Mabel for some more optimistic suitor, for I should want my wife and the mother of my children a woman who would play the game squarely with me and who had honor and honesty bred into her very bones.

If Mother has kept Father's nose to the grindstone all of his life trying to pay his extravagances, I would never let myself in for a lifetime of slavery by marrying her daughter for I should want a wife who would be a helpmate instead of a millstone around my neck.

If Mother is a poor housekeeper where nothing is ever done on time, where the meals are a menace to life and where there is no order or system of management, I would not endanger my stomach and my happiness by putting them in Mabel's hands, for I would know that she did not even have a standard of good housekeeping, nor know the first principle about making a comfortable home.

Nor would I marry Mabel if her mother is a shrewish, tyrannical, overbearing woman of whom her husband stands in cowering fear. I should reflect that Mabel might have inherited Mamma's temper, and that anyway, I did not want a wife who had been reared in an atmosphere in which men and women do not exercise a decent self-control over their tongues.

But if Mother at 50 is more interesting and better company than most girls; if she is large-minded and intelligent and humorous and sympathetic; if her husband still adores her, and her grown children make of her a pal; if her household runs as if on skids; if she has been a real partner to her husband in her marriage and the prop and stay of her family, then I should implore Mabel to marry me, for I should

BLOOD RUNS COLD

By Ann Demarest

YESTERDAY: Charles Whitefield, the artist who lives on the third floor, is interviewed. Dirck surprises him into admitting that Miss Wells was in his apartment the evening of the murder.

Chapter 17

Dinner With Dirck

I didn't like having to come into the murdered girl's apartment so often, and I had to keep my eyes away from the dressing table.

The portfolio was propped against the wall behind the desk. Dirck laid it on the bed, untied the tapes and brought out about a dozen drawings. They were all done in charcoal, heads sketched from casts. I looked at them carefully.

"Well," I said, "in the first place, Mr. Kolff, this is the work beginning are given in art school, but it seems to me they are very well done."

The drawings had been sprayed to keep them from smudging, so the dates in the corner were legible.

SUN OUTFIT

BY ANNE ADAMS

Every fond mother who loves to dress up her child gets even more satisfaction out of it if she "makes every stitch herself." In Pattern 4411, Anne Adams presents a versatile style that's an all-day frock or a sun-and-fun outfit. The bodice pans out into yokes. Over the yoke are two sleeves and the sides of the bodice cut the round neck lower, and you've a sun-frock. The square shoulder-pieces prevent too much sunburn. A matching or contrasting sunbonnet is demure and useful for shading young eyes from the sun. Do go gay with rick-rack or ruffing on the sun-style; lace and bows on the frock.

Pattern 4411 is available in children's sizes, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6, dress, takes 2 yards 35 inch fabric; sun-tan; frock and bonnet, 2½ yards 35 inch fabric.

of what she did for him. Fortunately for her, he died and we all hoped that she had learned something about men from him. But no, her second choice was a drunkard who also had to be supported and who finally eloped with a rich widow who, he probably thought, could buy him champagne instead of beer.

The present prospect is even more hopeless than his predecessors because he is an unappreciated genius, too temperamental to earn his living by any honest work, and who spends his time weeping on my daughters' shoulder and borrowing her money while he rails at a heartless world that doesn't acclaim him a genius. Of course, I don't suppose anything can be done to change my daughter, but I just wonder about her taste in men.

DISGUSTED MOTHER.

Answer:

I once had an old cook who used to say, "You can't tell where your love falls." I and I gave that explanation as well as anything else why women marry the way they do. You can't attribute it to any known cause, because you see women making the most incongruous choice of husbands, making marriages that even a moron baby would know were bound to end in disaster.

Probably it is not lack of judgment but an excess of femininity that makes girls marry these human derelicts. They are sloshing over with the maternal spirit and they can't resist the temptation to marry a man whom they can mother and pity and pet and take care of. Strong men don't appeal to them. It is the weaklings that they can't turn out into a cold, hard world where they will have to shift for themselves.

And of course, the women who make a habit of marrying drunkards and gamblers and rouses do it for the fun of reforming them. A experience teaches them nothing. Even when they have had to divorce a sinner who refused to give up his sin they are ready to take on another rotter.

It Was Just Before Easter That St. Patrick Scored One Of His Victories in Ireland

BY NELL CHAMBERLAIN
WHEN the Irish step forth Sunday "wearin' the green" to honor their patron, St. Patrick, just a week before Easter Sunday, perhaps not many of them will realize that there is more connection between St. Patrick and Easter than an occasional proximity of dates. History reveals it was on Easter Sunday, March 26, 433, that St. Patrick scored a major victory in his missionary work in Ireland and dealt a decisive blow to the pagan religion, Druidism, which up to that time had been rampant on the island.

The story goes that Patrick, traveling through Ireland toward Tara on his missionary pilgrimage, heard that the pagan chieftains of Erin were summoned to a great feast at Tara by the supreme monarch of Ireland on Easter day. The saint felt that this would be a propitious time to strike a decisive blow at Druidism, and so he set out for the royal mansion, reaching the hill of Slane at the opposite end of the valley from Tara the night before Easter. The monarch had decreed that all fires were to be extinguished throughout the width and breadth of the land and remain out until the signal blaze at the royal mansion. However, the night before Easter St.

Lawrence Professor Gives Each Side 50-50 Chance for Victory in European Conflict

STATING that the European war is more like a game of chess, Dr. Louis C. Baker, professor of modern languages at Lawrence college, said that the various countries are making constant shifts in their lineup and checking and counter-checking each move by the opponent, in a talk on the present European situation before Appleton Woman's club Thursday afternoon at the club house.

Describing the changing attitude on the part of the various countries involved since the early days of the crisis, Dr. Baker said that the strategy of the war has turned out to be quite different from what was expected. The allies, he said, hoped to choke off Germany and starve her out, but it has developed that Germany is capable of holding out indefinitely, and people are now doubting that the element of time is in favor of the allies.

"The war cannot be won by a stalemate," the speaker stated. "The chances are about 50-50 as to the outcome of the war. Dr. Baker said, and any views as to a possible revolt in Germany and overthrowing of Hitler are only wishful thinking."

Auxiliary to V.F.W. Hears Report on Work

A community service report by Mrs. John R. E. Miller at the meeting of the Auxiliary to Veterans of Foreign Wars last night at Eagle hall showed that 61 magazines were sent to St. Elizabeth Hospital and the city home, 10 infants garments were made for the Red Cross, and a crocheted sweater set for a child was made and given to a needy prospective mother.

Three members were initiated and the auxiliary voted to send an Easter box to soldiers in the veterans hospital in Milwaukee and a gift to headquarters for the treasure chest to be given away at the state encampment. An invitation was extended to the members to attend open house next Thursday at Elk hall in celebration of the one hundredth birthday anniversary of Commander Charles Gosha, only surviving Civil war veteran in Appleton.

Election of officers will take place at the next meeting, and a joint installation with the post will take place April 25. Cards were played after the meeting and prizes won by Mrs. Max Buske, Mrs. Gordon Kitzmiller and Mrs. Henry Brandenburg. A special prize went to Mrs. Henry Schwalbach. A dinner preceded the meeting, with Mrs. William Storm as chairman, Mrs. John Woehler as co-chairman, and Mrs. Barney Gamsky as general chairman.

The De Molay degree will be exemplified by John F. Rose, chapter, Order of De Molay, at the meeting of Waverly lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, next Tuesday night at Masonic temple. The De Molay boys will be guests of the Masons at a lunch and entertainment after the meeting. H. D. Purdy will present a magician act.

Two new members, Mrs. George Baer and Mrs. Harold Kosbab, were initiated into Delta chapter of the Employees Mutual Benefit association at a meeting Thursday afternoon at Odd Fellows hall. A special prize awarded at the meeting went to Mrs. Albert Flenz.

Plans were made for a social meeting March 28. Mrs. Dale Coley was appointed general chairman for the day and her assistants will be Mrs. Lloyd Ackman, Mrs. Lester Asmus, Mrs. Roland Arndt, Mrs. Roy Austin, Mrs. Jack Babbitt, Mrs. Frank Bayer, Mrs. Michael Benzschawel, Mrs. Homer Benton, Mrs. Ervin Bogan, Mrs. A. Church Choir Will Present 'Adoramus Te'

A N Easterlude cantata, "Adoramus Te" by Joseph W. Clokey, will be presented by the choir of Memorial Presbyterian church at the morning service Sunday. The music by a modern composer is highly reminiscent of the sacred music written prior to Bach, and the words, instead of following the usual scriptural outline of the Passion, have woven in some of the loveliest legends of the Crucifixion and Resurrection. The words were written by Loraine Van Hundingdon Miller.

Stanley Gunn is organist and choir director, and the personnel of the choir is as follows: Sopranos, Mrs. J. W. Appling, Mrs. Annette Ellis, Mrs. Louis Favez, Miss Margaret Fox, Mrs. Earl Fraser, Miss Ruth Grothuis, Mrs. Harold Heller, Miss Marian Melendy, Miss Dorothy Schenck, Miss Betty Jane Schoonmaker and Miss Andrea Stephenson; contraltos, Miss Mary Brandenburg, Mrs. William Farnum, Miss Patricia Guenther, Miss Olga Heller, Miss Jean Hoelzer, Miss Ruth Marie Iwen and Miss Peggy Olvick; tenors, Jack Bletzinger and Dr. Willis Van Horn, baritone, George Ballard, Paul Carv Jr., Carroll McElathron, Leonard Witter and Frank Zahrt.

First Baptist church auditorium which has been undergoing redecoration will be completed this week and be ready for use by the congregation Sunday. Robert Stammer interior decorator, had the contract for the work.

Junior Mission band of First English Lutheran church will meet at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the church.

Pilgrim Fellowship of First Congregational church will meet at 7:30 Sunday night at the church. W. J. Mummie will show movies after which a social hour will be held.

Mrs. Ray Agen, 1426 N. Alvin street, entertained Circle 1 of Emmanuel Evangelical church at a dessert luncheon Thursday afternoon at her home. Twenty-one guests were present. Miss Annabelle Dornmann, Chicago, a niece of the hostess, entertained with violin selections. She is a member of the Civic Symphony orchestra at Chicago. Delta Gamma Chapter Will Observe Silver Anniversary

A LPHA ZETA chapter of Delta Gamma sorority, installed at Lawrence college Sept. 11, 1915, by national officers and representatives from various neighboring chapters, will celebrate its silver anniversary Saturday. Planned for the day are an alumnae reunion luncheon at 12:30 at the Candle Glow Tea room and a banquet at 6:30 in the evening at the Conway hotel for actives and alumnae.

Guest of honor at both affairs will be Miss Ethel Phillips, Chicago, national publicity director of the sorority and a former member of the Lawrence college chapter. At the evening banquet she will speak on plans for the national Delta Gamma convention June 23 to 29 at Mackinac island.

Installation of the local chapter took place at the Meredith home, the present George H. Schmidt home, 207 N. Green Bay street, when 34 members of the local sorority, Theta Gamma Delta, were pledged and initiated into the national Delta Gamma. Mrs. Meredith was a member of the University of Wisconsin chapter of the sorority. She and Mrs. Sara Parker Treat of the Northwestern chapter, and George Banta, Sr., the only man member of the organization, were the ones who urged the local group to petition the national sorority. All were present at the banquet held the evening after the initiation at the Sherman house, now the Conway hotel.

Delta Gamma was organized nationally in 1874 at Oxford, Miss. There are now 49 collegiate chapters in the United States and four in Canada. All of them observe Founders' day with special banquets about the middle of March. This is always a reunion time for alumnae of the organization.

Some of the outstanding alumnae of the national sorority are Ruth Bryan Rohrer, former United States minister to Denmark; Gratia Countryman, head of the American Library association; Grace Abbott, head of the Children's Bureau of the United States; Betty Tennant, a nurse under the Rockefeller Foundation; Dorothy Gardner, prominent in the literary field, and Olea Schrottky, a member of the Appleton chapter and now a national Girl Scout worker.

Jeanne Ruhling, Donald Bohl Give Capable Interpretations In Leading Roles of 'June Mad'

BY ENOLA BRANDT
A DRAMATIC episode in the life of the girl next door — that was "June Mad," the 3-act comedy which the senior class of Appleton High school presented for a near-capacity audience Thursday night. The authors, Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements, have succeeded in capturing through lines and situations that elusive and contradictory period of growing-up known as adolescence; and Miss Ruth McKenna, head of the speech department, did a sympathetic and penetrating job in translating the varying moods and tempos to the stage.

The play opens briskly with a fencing duel between the 15-year-old Penny Wood and the "neighbor boy," Chuck Harris. Penny, who scoffs at love and dreams of looking herself up in her room to become a writer, finds her life upset by Roger Van Fleck, a "cosmopolitan" and a friend of Penny's young uncle. From that point on Penny succeeds in learning the ecstasy of love, the pain of heartbreak, the despair of remorse. When the play ends Penny is convinced that she has really lived.

Handles Lead Well
Jeanne Ruhling offered a sensitive interpretation of Penny in all her fluctuating moods. To capture Penny when she was riding the high waves of blissful happiness as well as when she was overwhelmed by chagrin and a bruised pride was not an easy assignment. Miss Ruhling had the right perspective and understanding of her role that makes for good acting.

Donald Bohl as Chuck Harris sustained his part throughout with a combination of careless indifference toward social customs and intensity of feeling when his own life is involved, that is typical of the boy who is reluctant to admit that the girls are significant. Both Cecelia Speel and Tom Nolan handled the roles of Penny's parents with a mature touch unusual for high school students.

A lovable pest who believed in the powers of persistence was the 14-year-old Millie Lou played by Bertha Smyrnes. David Bliss had the right dash of conscious sophistication in his interpretation of Roger Van Fleck, the "smoothie" who upsets the apple cart, slangy and casual and smart, but a little over-acted by his cosmopolitan friend was Mervyn Roberts, Penny's young uncle, played by Donald Smith.

William Mullen was Chuck's father, who is unsympathetic toward his son's ambition to build airplanes. Lois Schultz was properly languid as Julie, Mervyn's girl friend; and Lisbeth Atcherson and James Koss drew laughs every time they crossed the stage as Effie and Elmer, the Wood's hired help. The two Wentworth children were played by Robert Wilch and Elizabeth Wood.

General manager for the play was Robert Otto. He was assisted in the ticket sales by Armin Scheurle, Darleen Knoke and Harvey Gygis, faculty sponsor. Peter Giovannini, art supervisor, had charge of the art direction in connection with the advertising while Robert Bayley, Marie Tilly, Margaret Ogilvie, Talbot Peterson, Marion Weickert, Patricia Connelly, Roland Vogt and Miss Ellen Sweet, English instructor, adviser, took care of promotion.

Stage Managers
Stage managers were Miss Kathryn Fralish, speech instructor, Harry Cameron, manual arts instructor, and Donald Jones. Their assistants were James Weisberger, Joseph Merkes, Russell Meertz, Russell Doherty, Harold Deltgen and Robert Rossmel. The set, a typical living room, was designed by Miss Fralish and Margaret Albrecht. Assistants were Betty Schneider, Marion Runge, Doris Rehmer, Jane Melby and Marjorie Heins.

Properties were gathered by Miss McKenna, Mary Jane Thoms and Ethel Rademacher. Lighting effects were the work of Jack Burroughs, art instructor, adviser, Fred Trezise, George Schuessler, Eugene Kilioren, John Zwicker, Jacob Pawers, Edward Reuter, Jack Walsh, Robert Sigal, Miss Rademacher and Miss Connelly. The make-up corps consisted of Mary Kay O'Keefe, Leo Griesbach, Margaret Lally, Janet Jones, Mary Ellen Notaras and Germaine Oestreich. Music between the acts was played by the concert band under the direction of E. C. Moore.

Board Votes to Construct Park Shelter Building

Plans Approved and Sent To WPA and State Industrial Commission

Plans for the proposed shelter building for Erb park were approved yesterday by the Appleton Park board. Work on the structure is expected to start about April 15.

A fund of $2,500, set up this year in the park budget, is expected to cover the cost of the building to the city. The cost of the labor and part of the materials will be paid by the WPA under the park board's $160,000 WPA project. The plans have been sent to the WPA and the state industrial commission for approval.

The shelter building, which will be 80 by 50 feet in size, will be erected in the northeast quarter of Erb park and will be decorative as well as useful. The pavilion will be open, with an overhanging roof and an enclosed section, 14 by 40 feet in size, in the west end of the structure. This section will house lavatories, a place to store equipment and a kitchen and concession room. Eventually the board intends to move the ice skating rink nearer the proposed building so that the enclosed section can be heated and used as a warming place by skaters in the winter.

Double Fireplace

A huge double fireplace, built of stone, will decorate the east end of the open pavilion, the roof of which will be supported by stone pillars. Seats will be built around the bases of the pillars and the area under the roof will be paved with concrete.

On the south side of the building and facing the picnic area will be a band stand with terraces of concrete. The band stand will be 40 feet long and 18 feet wide and will make an ideal place for concerts in the summer months.

The board also discussed several offers of land for the expansion of the municipal golf links within the city limits. The board has an option on the William Knudsen farm, Calumet county, for the extension of the golf course.

The Outagamie Conservation club was given permission to use the Pierce park pavilion for its third annual Wild Life exhibit which will be held at the park May 17, 18 and 19.

Chattanooga District Favors Third Term for President Roosevelt

Chattanooga, Tenn. (AP)—New Dealers today hailed a pro-third-term unofficial referendum in Hamilton (Chattanooga) county as indicative of sentiment for a Roosevelt-instructed Tennessee delegation to the Democratic convention.

By better than 5 to 1, voters in this consistently pro New Deal area in the heart of the Tennessee Valley Authority expressed sentiment in favor of a third term in yesterday's balloting conducted in conjunction with the regular county primary.

Returns from 70 to 71 precincts gave 10,909 votes for a third term and 2,013 against.

A show of sentiment for nomination of Secretary of State Hull, whose home is but a 100 miles from here, was side-stepped by Roosevelt supporters, who said the Tennesseean would not accept the nomination if Mr. Roosevelt became a candidate.

There was no organized opposition to the third-term proposal. County Judge Will Cummings, leader of a movement for a Roosevelt-instructed Tennessee delegation said "I'm gratified with the results. We just wanted to show the president and the nation what we thought of his New Deal."

The question "Do you favor Roosevelt for a third term?" was printed on the ballot for nomination of county officers.

Order Limestone Early, Agent Says

Magnus Says Operations At Murphy Quarry Will End Soon

He pointed out that the spring break-up soon will be here and weight limits undoubtedly will be put into effect on roads within the next few weeks. He advised that farmers wanting limestone during the next two months to place orders not later than March 23.

Letters Mailed In Direct Appeal For Finnish Aid

Committee Seeks Money For Rehabilitation Work in Finland

The committee of Appleton men organized to sponsor the appeal for funds to help Finnish men, women and children made homeless by the Russian-Finnish war today mailed 165 letters in a direct appeal to possible donors.

The general appeal in Appleton will be made Monday or Tuesday as the need for money for rehabilitation work since the war ended, has increased.

The end of the war has brought more problems for the Finnish people, many of whom are forced to leave the western area turned over to Russia in this week's peace pact, Kenneth Corbett, a committee member, said today. Thousands of war widows, orphans and others forced to leave their property behind are vitally in need of help, he said.

The committee's interest is strictly humanitarian, and always was, Corbett stated. The intent of the appeal never was to raise money to carry on the war.

A letter of encouragement was received today by the committee from Walter J. Kohler, who heads the state appeal for the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc. headed by Herbert Hoover in the nation. The money collected will be turned over to Kohler's committee and then to the national group for distribution in Finland.

The letters mailed today are personal messages signed by the members of the Appleton committee. Treasurer of the drive is W. A. Strassburger who is on the executive committee with William Buchanan, J. Neller, Karl M. Haugen and Kenneth Corbett. Other committee members are E. C. Hilfert, Joseph J. Plank, J. R. Whitman, R. S. Powell, Peter Paulson, John R. Riedl, E. A. Oberweiser, Dewey Zwicker, C. S. Boyd and F. J. Harwood.

Benson Designs Table For Display Purposes.

Nearly 2,000 are Sold

A display table designed by Arthur H. Benson of the Schuler Hardware company is becoming widely used and promoted by a nationally known aluminum firm.

Benson designed the step-type of table, with five shelves, last year. It affords opportunity to show about three times the quantity of aluminum as was possible in other models.

An aluminum company has placed pictures and information on the table in the hands of its salesmen and has reported that nearly 2,000 have been sold. They are manufactured at New London.

It Is Said--

Something that very few persons in the audience at last night's senior class presentation of "June Mac" noticed was that Donald Bohl, who convincingly took the part of Chuck Harris, suffered from a sprained ankle. Bohl sprained the ankle at his home Tuesday and it was thought he would be unable to appear in the cast. Harold Brice, of the high school coaching staff, came to the rescue and taped Bohl's ankle so he could walk during the play.

Republicans Embarrassed by Factionalism Within Ranks

BY W. B. RAGSDALE

Washington.—(AP)—The Republicans are no less embarrassed by factionalism as their convention approaches than are the Democrats.

Four years ago when the signs pointed to a Democratic landslide, eastern Republicans opened their ears to the clamor of western party members and nominated Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

Now there are signs that the easterners are seeking control again. Westerners have been concerned over that development for months. Conferences have been held in several middle-western and mountain states designed to bring their delegations together to fight for a common cause, which in this case is a "liberal" Republican platform.

But the westerners have been better of a leader. For many years Senator William E. Borah of Idaho was the clarion voice of the west at Republican conventions.

This time Borah's voice will not be heard. Instead, the fight will have to be led by his sophomore partner, William Allen White, the Kansas editor, and Landon.

The latter will be there for the floor battles. But he has so completely removed his name from the list of candidates that he will be speaking as an individual and not as a contender for the nomination, backed by a block of western delegates.

Already, however, both men have been active behind the scenes, and White has stripped away all verbiage to put the situation in these blunt words:

"The Republican conservative crowd has the money, and with the money will go the south in the Republican convention. But the western crowd has the electoral votes necessary to elect a Republican president."

Mercury Rise to Continue, Report

Streets Turn Slushy as Weather Warms in City and Vicinity

Pedestrians and bike riders fumed today as passing cars threw sprays of slush, which formed on streets as the mercury climbed steadily.

Down to the 24-hour low of 15 above at 1 o'clock this morning, the thermometer stood at 34 degrees at 12:30 this afternoon and appeared to be heading higher.

Partly cloudy tonight and tomorrow, with warmer weather Saturday is the forecast for the state issued today by the Milwaukee bureau. Yesterday's maximum reading was 26 above, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

There were periods of sunshine during the day, but gray clouds were dominant as March softened after a couple of days of blustering.

Los Angeles, with 82, and Minneapolis, with two above, were the warmest and coldest places respectively in the nation yesterday.

Scores Decline In Cheese Price

Milk Pool Says Monopolies Causing Farm 'Feudalism'

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison — Illegal monopolies operating through the Plymouth cheese exchange, are bringing Wisconsin agriculture to the margin of "agricultural feudalism," the Wisconsin Milk pool has charged.

The pool's monthly organ, edited by Harry Jack of Appleton, H. F. Dries of Neshkoro, declared that in the last two weeks of February the cheese board drove the price of cheese downward 2 cents and thus in two short weeks illegal monopoly operating at Plymouth filched from our one million dairy people in Wisconsin $8,000,000 of purchasing power.

"A report of the federal reserve bank at Chicago for January reports a 9 per cent increase in production of cheese, and a 17 per cent increase in consumption."

"On the basis of every reliable report at home and abroad, a shortage of food throughout the world and the potential possibilities of a shortage still more alarming, the price of cheese should have advanced rather than declined," it was asserted.

The current issue also contains a discussion by Jack of the long-discussed central marketing agency for Wisconsin dairy products, re-

Mueller, Wesley Sachs, William Schmidt and Marcella Stewart. Service during Holy Week at the Seymour churches will be held as follows:

English communion services will be held at the Lutheran church at 7:45 Wednesday evening and German communion service at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. Also communion service at one o'clock Friday afternoon, Good Friday.

Union communion service will be held at 7:45 Thursday evening in the Evangelical church and the Rev. Milton Feldt, pastor of the Methodist church will deliver the sermon.

Union Good Friday service will be held in the Seymour Methodist church with services beginning at 1:30. Each of the three churches, Evangelical, Congregational and Methodist churches, will participate in this service.

Rahmlow Herd Is High Producer of Butterfat in '39

Shows Average of 391.2
In Testing Association No. 2

The Edward C. Rahmlow herd was the best producer in the Outagamie County Dairy Herd Improvement association, No. 2, during 1939 with each cow producing 11,170 pounds of milk or 391.2 pounds of butterfat. The Huebner Bros. herd was second with an average of 385.8 pounds of butterfat. The herds of Mrs. Mary Sams and Arnold Lemke were third and fourth with averages of 376.3 and 341.1 of fat, respectively.

The high cow for the year was in the Sams herd with a record of 15,255 pounds of milk containing 528.2 pounds of butterfat. Second and fourth in individual production were cows in the Rahmlow herd with 520 and 496.4 pounds of fat. The third high cow, with 499.5 pounds, was in the Huebner herd. A cow in the Frank Drinks herd placed fifth with 495.7 pounds.

The Louis Timm herd took top honors in the association for February with an average of 41.7 pounds of butterfat. The Huebner herd was a close second with an average of 40.1 pounds. A cow in the Huebner herd placed high in production for the month with 72.8 pounds of butterfat. Second high cow producing 67.3 pounds was owned by Bert Weyenberg.

Following are owners and number of cows producing 40 or more pounds of fat for the month: Edward C. Rahmlow 3, Louis Timm 8, Frank Drinks, Jr. 4, Arnold Lemke 2, Edwin Komp 2, Al Tiedt 4, Albert Hughes 4, Emil Schultz 5, Huebner Bros. 12, Lawrence Benzel 2, Bert Weyenberg 5, Arnold Ahlman 4, Paul Ashmann 2, Mrs. Sams 6, Ben Bollinski 8, H. R. Bernard 2, Orville Pettit 2, Victor Thern 5, Irving C. Arndt 1, Loren Anderson 5 and Henry Haferberger 1.

cently advocated by Governor Julius P. Heil.

Jack revealed that during his chairmanship of the state board of agriculture he had offered at a conference of state agricultural representatives to place the Wisconsin Milk pool, of which he is president, at the disposal of such a project.

"I suggested to the conference that we were willing to place our organization on the table along with the program of the Wisconsin Cheese Producers' Cooperative association to let them take from the organization, all or part of the operations, and change the personnel entirely if necessary," he said.

Home Agent Urges Greater Use Of Eggs While Prices are Low

Since the price of eggs is low, now is the time to indulge in omelet and soufflé, angel food, sponge cake and other fluffy egg dishes. Miss Irene Skutley, county home demonstration agent, advised housewives today.

Many facts have come to light only recently during the research on egg cookery under Dr. Florence King at the department of agriculture.

For light fluffy cakes, omelets and so on, Dr. King advises using eggs with thick whites. Some hens lay eggs with thick whites, and others lay eggs with thin whites. Inheritance decides. But as counts too, for thick whites grow thin as the egg grows older.

Potato Yields are Increased by Use Of Proper Sprays

In two of the last three years, the better potato sprays tested by O. C. Whipple and T. C. Allen of the agricultural staff of the state university have increased yields by 75 to 100 bushels per acre, according to a bulletin received by County Agent J. F. Magnus.

The two workers report that for 1938 spraying had no important effect on the yield of Irish Cobbler in these trials, apparently because these potatoes matured before hopperburn and diseases caused any considerable damage. In nearby late-maturing commercial fields, spraying was helpful even in 1938.

One of the best sprays tested by the university workers was ordinary Bordeaux mixture made of 5 pounds copper sulphate, 5 pounds lime, and 50 gallons of water. This combination gives good control of hopperburn and blight diseases. Where there is trouble with Colorado potato beetles, better known simply as "potato bugs," it is regarded as advisable to include two pounds calcium arsenate in the mixture.

Give Farmers Aid In Planning for 1940 AAA Program

Committeemen Want Participation Intentions Filed by May 1

Community committeemen now are assisting Outagamie county farmers in making out their 1940 farm plans for participation in the farm program. Farmers expecting to participate in the program are being asked to make out and sign their plans for participation before May 1 so as to be eligible for payments.

The farm plans for participation will show the allotments, the maximum payments, and number of soil building units required. Committeemen are explaining that participation, as in the past, is entirely voluntary but acreages of special and general soil depleting crops are restricted to the farm allotments in order to earn maximum allotment payments.

Farm allotments, it is pointed out, represent the individual farmer's share of the national allotments for the special, as well as the general, soil depleting crops. The allotments, together with other features of the "Ever Normal Granary," it is being explained, were designed to provide ample supplies of agricultural products without the disastrous effects of surpluses to the farmer or crop failures on the consumer.

Members of the county committee are suggesting that farmers begin to plan their operations so that they will be able to save the time of the committeemen in filling out the intention forms.

Larger payments are available for help in carrying out soil building practices in 1940 but a larger part of the payment must be earned by limiting fertilizer applications, tree planting and erosion control practices, since alfalfa and clover seedings are only given half as much credit in 1940 as they were in 1939, according to Joseph Garvey, chairman of the county committee.

Much high priced lettuce seed has been wasted in the last few years by planting it on land too sour to grow the crop or lacking in available phosphorus or potash. With more of the soil building payments available for lime and fertilizer bet- ter seedings, it is thought, should result and greater benefits result from the money invested in seed.

Colorado produced $12,765,165 worth of gold in 1939.

Soil Tests Reveal Plant Food Stocks Are Dropping Low

Applications of Phosphorus, Potash Needed On Many Lands

Soils of Outagamie county are being depleted of their available stocks of phosphorus and potash, tests made during the last year show, according to a bulletin received by J. F. Magnus, Outagamie county agent.

Harold Hull, in charge of the State Soils Laboratory at the University of Wisconsin, reports that out of some 54,000 soil samples tested in 1939, 78 per cent were low in available phosphorus and 44 per cent were below par in available potash. These samples tested, either in Madison or in the county agents' offices, were from practically every county in the state.

A highly productive soil should have from 75 to 100 pounds of available phosphorus and around 200 pounds of available potash per acre. In addition it should be nearly neutral (not acid) for the best results with alfalfa and red clover. Alsike clover and soybeans can tolerate a higher degree of acidity and still do fairly well.

Soil which contain 40 to 50 pounds of available phosphorus and 150 pounds of available potash may produce fair crops of grains and corn, but will not produce maximum crops of alfalfa or clover. Since the legume crops require large amounts of phosphorus and potash and are usually grown for two or more years the necessary commercial fertilizer should be applied to the soil at the time these crops are seeded.

On fields which are to be seeded down to legumes, a soil test should be made. If, for example, 50 pounds of phosphorus and 175 pounds of potash are shown to be available, the application of 100-200 pounds of 0-20-10 fertilizer will show results in both the nurse crop and the yields of alfalfa which follow.

Soils which show by test to be deficient in both phosphorus and potash should have an application of a fertilizer containing both of these plant food elements if maximum benefit is to result. If the supply of either of these plant foods is deficient, crop yields will be limited to the amount which is possible with the supply of the more limited element.

If the soil test shows that the land is sour, lime, in some form, should be added before, or at the time, phosphate fertilizer is applied in order to get best results from the phosphate.

Johnson Sees No Reason for Any Apology to British Press

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON
Washington, D. C.—A distinguished columnist colleague says that the London Sunday Dispatch asked "some of us" to explain why "when we in America are so opposed to Germany we should be irritated over the British blockade activities which are designed to bring Hitler to his knees."

The explanation was in part: "In protesting against some feature of contraband controls our state department was seeking, I think, to keep the record straight. In this it undoubtedly had the support of American public opinion but largely for the same reason... all we are asking, I think, is that in using the blockade, Great Britain be as considerate as possible of American sensibilities."

I also was "one of us," so queried by the London Dispatch. It wasn't the first time. After Lord Beaverbrook stuck his neck out on what he intimated was our tardy and insufficient participation in the World War and our position on the war debts, I took a crack at his argument. He called me an opportunity to defend myself in his papers. I regarded that as I regard this offer to defend, in the British press, the American position on the blockade, as an impertinence.

If the state department's protest of outrageous violations of our neutral rights at international law are not intended to mean what they say but only to "keep the record straight," then the late Senator Borah was right when he fumed that it was just a kind of British embassy. If it is just to "keep the record straight" let's ask "to keep the record straight with whom?" There is only one answer: "With the American people." (or as the reply in question puts it) "American sensibilities."

But that wouldn't be keeping the record straight. It would be keeping the record crooked. It would be something like the practical treason of our ambassador to England during the World War, who used to present our protests over violations of the freedom of the seas with what amounted to advice that they were for American home consumption merely and ought to be ignored. That, like what is now suggested, amounted to betrayal of the trust of an entire nation.

There is no doubt of American hatred of Hitler and sympathy with the Allies—up to the point of engaging in either military war or the more deadly and modern form of war, economic war. To the extent that we willingly and at great sacrifice gave up neutral rights on our own motion, as we did to a re-amounts to saying that we don't care in our neutrality acts, that is care if our own coasts are blockaded, our announced neutrality cord with our policies since the be-

Terms Hi-Jacking of Rights Dishonorable, Indefensible
My columnist friend does not condone this kind of bad faith because he says that this policy has the support of the American people. That absolves him, but it marks and unprecedent demerits to saying that we don't care in our neutrality acts, that is care if our own coasts are blockaded, our announced neutrality cord with our policies since the being practices in 1940 but a larger part of the payment must be earned by limiting fertilizer applications, tree planting and erosion control practices, since alfalfa and clover seedings are only given half as much credit in 1940 as they were in 1939, according to Joseph Garvey, chairman of the county committee.

Much high priced lettuce seed has been wasted in the last few years by planting it on land too sour to grow the crop or lacking in available phosphorus or potash. With more of the soil building payments available for lime and fertilizer better seedings, it is thought, should result and greater benefits result from the money invested in seed.

Colorado produced $12,765,165 worth of gold in 1939.

sinning. But to the extent that rights are hijacked out of us at the points of bayonets or under muzzle of great guns, that is dishonorable and indefensible and a violation of both American and British tradition, also since our beginnings. I can't see wherein we owe any apology or self-justification to the British press, much less any request that they let us bluster to save our faces, but not to take it seriously. I think the expression of such an opinion greatly weakens our state department's position, or what in honesty it ought to be.

17 Reserve Cagers See Action on 'B' Squad at Menasha

Hillard Kozlowski Has Record of 31 Points to Lead Second Team

Menasha—A total of 17 players saw action on the reserve squad of the Menasha high school basketball team during the past season. Of the squad only three are juniors, six are sophomores and eight are freshmen. All will make bids for varsity posts next year although the competition will be tough as eight of the 12 varsity men will be back.

Hillard Kozlowski, a junior, was the leading scorer for the reserves with 31 points on 13 field goals and five free throws. Clement Gavinski, sophomore center, and Edward Naleway, a freshman, were second high in scoring with 23 points each. The reserves won only four games and lost 10 during the season but in all home games anywhere from 12 to 17 players saw action. As a result no one combination played for any great length of time and individual scoring chances were cut down.

Season Records
The reserves counted 58 baskets and 46 free throws for 164 points during the season. Opponents, however, counted 284 points on 112 field goals and 60 free throws. Personal foul records were almost even with 107 called against Menasha and 102 against opponents.

Board Rejects All Bids on Property

Will Advertise for Bids on Menasha Wooden Ware Company Land

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau
Oshkosh—The Winnebago county board this morning rejected all of the bids on the former Menasha Wooden Ware company property, acquired by the county through tax delinquency.

The rejection came on the recommendation of the tax deeds committee and supervisors then voted to advertise for bids on the land and buildings to be due May 1. The property will be divided into four sections for sale purposes and the county will sell any one of the sections or all of them.

The county was given a quit claim deed to the property on Dec. 28, 1939, after serving notice on the company of intention to take a tax deed on the land. The assessed valuation of the land and buildings last year was placed at $230,000 and the delinquent taxes on the property amounted to $58,000.

Neenah Kindergarten Pupils Dramatize 'Three Little Pigs'

Neenah—Demonstrations of the dramatization of the nursery story, "The Three Little Pigs," were presented by pupils in Miss Janet Menning's Washington school kindergarten Thursday morning to the children's parents and in the afternoon to teachers of kindergartens, first, second and third grades in the public school system.

The demonstration climaxed a complete study of the story, in which the children learned the roles of the various characters in the nursery tale, constructed the scenery and made costumes.

With the help of their teacher, the youngsters built four cardboard houses, one for the mother pig and the other three for the three little pigs. The houses, all of which are higher than the youngsters themselves, were built of cardboard and painted to correspond with the type of houses in the story. The children painted a mural for the background, drawing flowers

Wrestlers Show No Hard Feelings For Mat Drubbing

Neenah — Sportsmanship is embodied in the invitation by members of Coach George Christoph's Neenah High school wrestling team to hosts to Milwaukee, Washington high school matmen during the state high school wrestling tournament at Lawrence college.

The Milwaukee wrestlers, who handed the Neenah grapplers a drubbing last Saturday at Neenah, wouldn't be able to compete in the state tournament Friday and Saturday, March 22 and 23, were it not for the Neenah matmen.

After last Saturday's wrestling match, the Milwaukee coach men-abled to compete in the tournament because when the sports budget was compiled the tournament hadn't been scheduled and there wasn't enough money in the budget to completely finance the trip.

BLOOD RUNS COLD

By Ann Demarest

I looked at him sadly. "Dirck," I said, "your illusions are all very touching, but they don't mean a thing. Home life isn't always cream and roses."

"You may be right," he said, but he looked annoyed. "We can't jump you."

I felt sure that he was trying to convince himself that Joan Kent's mother had nothing to do with it. "She must have been home last night," I said half to myself, "even though Richard didn't see her when he got in."

Dirck dug in his pocket for his pipe. "I talked with Richard. And from all he told me, their mother wasn't particularly dominating, and yet—"

"How did she get along with Richard?"

"Oh, fine. He said, though, that he'd been home very little. He went to Prep School and then to college for a year. And this fall he got a position with a brokerage house downtown, so he hasn't lived home for a couple of years." He broke off abruptly. "Chris, be a good girl and wait a couple more minutes. I've got a hunch."

He dashed upstairs, so there was nothing for me to do but take my gnawing appetite back to my own apartment.

During the day I didn't mind the hell, but now that it was dark I felt depressed. The room was shadowy in the candlelight and I felt uneasy. New York and this house on George Street were strange now, and frightening. I was glad when Dirck finally came back. He closed the door behind him and walked over to me.

"I know all," he whispered, his eyes gleaming.

"Very Well Heeled"

I was pretty well sunk and practically starving. "All about what?"

"Mrs. Evans. I ran into her while I was upstairs. Her husband, James Evans, for whom you might be interested to know, her dog is named, 'Vilmer.'"

But she keeps in touch with him through the medium of the spirit and he has warned her several times that there would be trouble in this house."

I raised a skeptical eyebrow. "Did she really tell you all of this, Dirck Kolff, or are you making it up?"

He nodded solemnly. "I heard much more, a lot of which has slipped my mind, except that he owned a laundry and died, leaving her, as you would say, very well heeled."

"I never said that in my life. And if she has money, why is she living here?"

Dirck raised his eyes to the ceiling. "The money has gone to the four winds because she didn't follow my mind, except that he owned a laundry and died, leaving her, as you would say, very well heeled."

"Well," said the officer, with no evidence of good humor, "that man, I am that she isn't quite right."

The Sergeant called to us from the hall and Dirck opened the door.

"Well," said the officer, with no evidence of good humor, "that man, I am that she isn't quite right."

I've been there all this time trying to get him to admit that he heard some of the commotion last night. He didn't hear a sound. I asked him if he was deaf and he admitted that his left ear gave him a little trouble sometimes.

I couldn't help laughing. The Sergeant looked so funny when he got excited. But my mirth didn't improve his disposition. He turned to me and murmured something about making several arrests during the evening.

"It never can be said of Dirck Kolff that he travelled with the pack. I'll have to look around for a blonde, I think."

"Have you ever tried advertising?" I asked lazily.

"There are times, Miss Howarth, when a beating would do wonders with you."

He ordered more coffee. When the waiter left he asked abruptly whether I liked Richard MacDonald.

"Yes, pretty well," I said. "He isn't my idea of a strong character, though."

"You're probably right. He's awfully upset over this because he was devoted to his sister."

"She was keen looking."

"So I gathered, and very popular, too. But for the last few months she's been seeing mostly one man. That Lathrop chap. They were much in love."

"And Mr. Lathrop is still in hiding."

Dirck nodded. "That gets me. I can't see where he's keeping himself. It's in all the afternoon papers."

and he should have turned up by this time.

"After Lathrop got his affairs straightened out, he was going to marry Joan," Dirck went on.

"I think he murdered her for her diamonds," I said.

"Did you happen to meet Mr. Kimball's cook, valet and amanuensis, Ishi, when you went to look at that apartment?"

"No, he wasn't there. Isn't he ill? It seems to me that Mr. Kimball said when I moved in last night that both of his assistants were ill."

"He's away, upstate for a week, because his father is dying. Kimball hopes he'll be back soon. He's very fond of Ishi and he's helpless when he's away."

He reached for a cigarette. "Well, finish your coffee and we'll skip along. It's almost nine."

We skipped all right. That yellow car skidded on every piece of ice between Fourteenth street and the house. I crawled out of the car exhausted but grateful to be on two feet again.

Keefe Is Appointed Subcommittee Head

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau) Washington—Congressman Frank B. Keefe, Oshkosh Republican, has just been appointed chairman of the social security and pensions subcommittee of the newly-created conference on unemployment, the voluntary house committee to study and report on various phases of the unemployment problem.

Although members of the subcommittee, as well as those of the entire group, are made up of all political parties, Keefe says he "can't see why there should be any danger of a division along party lines." Problems of unemployment arising from social security and pension legislation are matters of statistics, not politics, he says.

The conference, as a whole, intends to present a program for "a fundamental attack on the problem of unemployment" before the adjournment of congress. In about two weeks, membership has grown from 24 to 60.

There are, altogether, 12 subcommittees. Congressman Merlino Hull, Black River Falls Progressive, is a member of that on taxation and unemployment. Congressman Joshua L. Johns, Algoma Republican, has been appointed to the subcommittee on trade barriers and unemployment.

Gordon Beyers, Ward Fox, Mildred Mayne, Earl Nehring; seventh grade—Betty Elandt, Lynn Peters, Doris Wienandt.

Above is the Buick SPECIAL 4-door touring sedan $996*

YOU never yet saw a band come down the street without someone out in front setting the tempo, while someone back in the crowd obediently thumped in time.

So you'll get what we mean when we ask, right out, why drive a car that's along just for the march—when you can pilot a Buick and show the others the way?

Maybe someday the others will have engines like velvet because they're electrically balanced after assembly; but Buick has them now.

Maybe tomorrow they will have coil springs all around that never need greasing—but Buick has them today.

Maybe sometime you'll get the five-foot front seat room and Foamtex cushions of the SUPER—maybe you'll get direction signals with automatic cut-off as standard equipment—but you can get those things and a lot besides on Buick this year.

Maybe someday you'll get a car as long as Buick for the money, or with a frame as heavy without paying more; maybe sometime there'll be another eight as big and roomy and powerful that's priced like a six.

But why take a chance on those maybes when this honey's here, ready for you to take over right now?

Fact is, when you step into this Buick you take over a car others will be trying to equal for years to come.

So drop in on your Buick dealer. Drop in to talk facts and figures, or drop in to see what next year's cars will try to look like.

Intercepted Pass Is Costly to Neenah Hi

Marshfield Boy Grabs Ball, Scores and Beats Rockets*SHAWANO WINS*Indians Defeat Platteville and Go Into The Finals

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — A disheartened band of Neenah High school cagers turned homeward today, ruefully considering the fate that eliminated them from the state high school basketball with a championship within sight.

In what will probably stand out as the highlight decision of the state high school competition here, Jorgensen's Red Rockets dropped an 18-17 decision last night when a light-footed Marshfield cager almost simultaneously with the closing gun lunged desperately for the backboard and turned in the decisive tally. Marshfield goes on to meet Shawano for the championship tonight.

One brief unguarded moment turned the scales for Marshfield. With the clock rapidly ticking off the seconds, and with a narrow one point lead established after an aggressive offense in the second half, Neenah sought to stall and maintain possession of the ball. Twice within the last two minutes of play Bauer, Marshfield forward, found opportunities to tie up the game with free throws. He missed. But he redeemed himself with glory. With five seconds to go, an ill-timed, slow pass, gave Bauer another chance. He intercepted the ball, dribbled furiously half the length of the floor and, with a one-handed pot shot, brought the crowd to its feet with the clinching marker.

There was only time left for a single pass from underneath the Marshfield board. The gun boomed Neenah's defeat and the end of its hopes for its first state championship in a decade.

Start Slowly
The Rockets started slowly, missing numerous close in shots after working the ball through the Marshfield defense. Jumping off to an early lead on Harland Hesselman's short shot, the Rockets sagged momentarily and Marshfield went ahead by 5-2 on a basket and free throw by Shear and another basket by Koller Hesselman put Neenah back into the game with another basket, but Koller dumped in a free throw to leave the Wisconsin valley entrant in front by 6-4 at the quarter.

Marshfield talked once more to open the second period, but Ed Winkelman hit from the field and Julius Herzfeldt followed to knot the count at 8-8. The teams exchanged baskets for the remainder of the period, with Herzfeldt, Bucky Kettering and Hesselman counting for Neenah. The halftime score was 12-12.

Hesselman put Neenah into the lead with a free throw after three minutes of the third period and Herzfeldt followed a minute later with a hook from the side. Hesselman counted again with a rebound after a scramble under the basket to run the score to 17-12 for the Rockets. At the end of the quarter, with Hesselman and Miller controlling the rebounds from each basket, Neenah dominated play completely to hold Marshfield without a point.

Marshfield broke its scoring famine of eleven minutes with a free throw in the last quarter and quickly followed with a pot basket to cut Neenah's lead to 17-15. Bauer, Marshfield forward, was fouled by Herzfeldt when he broke loose for a Turn to Page 13

Vike Tracksters Will Show at Armour Relays

Saturday afternoon Vince Jones, Jim Orwig and Ralph Colvin of the Lawrence Tech squad will enter the Armour Tech relays at the Chicago university fieldhouse. Jones will put the shot, Orwig will pole vault, and Colvin will run the 880. Of the three, Jones is conceded to be the most likely to win a place. In practice Vince was over the 46 foot mark all this last week. Orwig and Colvin also have a good chance to place.

The Armour Tech relays are noted for their heavy competition since there is absolutely no restriction placed on the kind of schools to enter.

Chicago — (U) — A field of 40 schools will slash away at new Armour relay records tomorrow in the 12th annual event at the University of Chicago.

Michigan State normal will count on a virtually new team to defend its college division honors, while a favored Marquette team was expected to find Wisconsin and Nebraska the chief obstacles in the defense of university class honors.

All-Stars Beaten By Akron, 35 to 32

Fourth Game of Championship Series Scheduled for Tonight

Akron, O. — (U) — The Oshkosh All Stars narrowly missed clinching the National Pro Basketball league championship last night.

Victors in the first two games of the three-out-of-five playoff series, the all stars were noosed out by the Akron Firestones in the third game, 35 to 32.

The Western and Eastern division champions meet here again tonight in the fourth game.

The Firestones took an early lead last night, but the Wisconsin quintet kept plugging away and at halftime had cut the Akron club's margin to 17 to 16. The game raged with lightning speed during much of the second half and was tied at 31-all before Novak and Cable sank the game-winning baskets for the home team.

Connie Mack Berry of Oshkosh, noosed out his high scoring teammate, Leroy Edwards, for game honors, scoring 14 points to Edwards' 13.

the composite list, while Appleton, Manitowoc and Green Bay East lost ground.

There was one change in the standings, Central moving past Fond du Lac into sixth place among teams now active in the conference.

Fourth Crown in Row
Oshkosh won its fourth consecutive championship, and needs only one more to the Appleton's mark of straight titles, set between 1931 and 1935 by Joe Shields. Central's crown was its second, and its first since 1923, the first year of the conference.

Oshkosh now leads the Valley in total cage championships, with seven. Appleton has six, Manitowoc four, East and Fond du Lac three each. Central and West two apiece.

Four Valley teams have passed the 100 mark in total victories, and another, East, came within one game of the coveted mark this season.

Terrors Still Lead
Appleton still leads the composite list with a high percentage of .684, and despite Oshkosh's spurt in the last four seasons, the Terrors are safe for several years to come. Appleton broke its even last season, winning half of its 14 games, and its average slid from .698 to .684.

Oshkosh the runner-up on the all-time standings won 12 of 14 games and boosted its percentage from .631 to .648. Next in line is Manitowoc which won only four games and dropped from .567 to .562.

East had the fourth best all-time mark, but the Red Devils, with a record the same as Manitowoc's, fell from .542 to .520.

Wildcats Move Up
West still is in fifth place, and is nowhere near East, but the Wildcats won eight games last season and pushed their percentage from .443 to .458.

Fond du Lac, in winning eight games to the West for third place during the 1940 season, raised its percentage from .413 to .425, but the co-championship Central team passed the Cardinals nevertheless.

Company D Quintet Is Beaten at Reformatory

With Kneip and Bauers going without a field goal, Company D basketball team lost to the Reformatory squad at Green Bay last night, 56 to 30. The Reformatory five grabbed a 10 to 6 lead at the quarter and held a 13 to 11 lead at the half. In the third quarter it was 24 to 17. Cy Burton led Company D with 11 points on four baskets and three free throws.

After the game Company D was treated to supper.

Baldock counted 15 points for his side, with Vollendorf making 12 for Manitowoc. Hilbert led 9 to 6 at the quarter and 22 to 18 at the half. In the third period Manitowoc scored 18 points while Hilbert led to 8. The game was exceptionally clean, only two fouls being called on Hilbert and seven on Manitowoc.

MENASHA — Favorites won opening round games in the ninth annual basketball tournament of Catholic grade school teams of the Green Bay diocese Thursday night at St. Mary's gymnasium. The first round of games will continue this afternoon and evening with the second round scheduled for Sunday afternoon and evening and the finals Monday afternoon and evening.

Holy Name, Kimberly, provided the most unusual feature in the history of the tournament by winning the opening game of the meet without the aid of a field goal. The Midgets, coached by Father Hietpas, collected only six free throws during the game and they were enough for a 6 to 5 victory over St. Boniface, Manitowoc.

The score was tied at 2-all at the first quarter and 3-all at the half. The Manitowoc team led 5 to 4 at the end of the third quarter but went scoreless through the fourth period. The Midgets collected the necessary gift shots to win.

Larson scored four points on gift tosses and Bourassa counted twice for Kimberly. The team missed seven free throws. Stadler scored two field goals for St. Boniface while Pauly scored the only free

St. Augustine, Fla. — (U) — Already minus many star performers due to an upset-sludged first round, the national winter amateur professional best ball golf tournament moved today into two 18-hole rounds that will halve the field twice by nightfall.

Rated an upset yesterday was the one-up victory of Clyde Usma, Jr., West Palm Beach, Fla. professional, and Walter Burkema, Evanston, Ill., amateur, over Henry Picard, P.G.A. champion from Hershey, Pa., and Frank Ford, Charleston, S. C., amateur.

The Jacksonville combination of Puck Lloyd Sparrow and amateur Duck Van Kleck turned in another surprise with a one-up victory over Jimmy Hines of Great Neck, N. Y., and Jimmy Ferrier, Australian open and amateur champion.

Herman Keiser of Springfield, Mo., and Dick Doerschler, schoolboy star from Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., also did the unexpected in taking a 21-hole thriller from favored Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., and Charles Whitehead of Plainfield, N. J.

The medalist team of Felix Serafin, Scranton, Pa., pro and Frank Allan of West Pittston, Pa., also fell by the wayside, dropping a 1 up decision to Paul Bell of Torrington, Conn., and Peter Gruntal of Scarsdale, N. Y.

Set-back
Now the Dukes are at the end of the trail—and with the coveted metropolitan invitational basketball championship just one game away. It may be that their third strenuous game in five nights—this one against Colorado University's thundering herd, three times winner of the Big Seven championship—will prove too much of a physical strain.

If that's true, Colorado will win. But if by some hook or crook Dukes can get his fatigued forces anywhere near peak shape, the "met" tourney's final crowd is for one of its supreme thrills.

Milwaukee — There's no law against the zone defense in basketball, but Coach Bill Chandler of Marquette university thinks that the coaches of the country should arrive at a "gentlemen's agreement" not to use it.

Elm Trees Win Over Fondy '5'

State K. C. Tournery To Wind Up Sunday

Team from Madison, Port Washington, Fond du Lac, Merrill, Manitowoc and Hartford will invade Elks alleys this weekend for final competition in the twenty-fourth annual Wisconsin Knights of Columbus Bowling association tournament. The tournament began Feb. 10.

Bob Lloyd, recently recovered from an illness, sparked the Appleton quint last night with six buckets for twelve points and a stellar floor game. He was followed by Sellers who bucketed nine points on four field goals and a free throw. The Bakers showed a good defense, allowing only four buckets in the first half and five in the second for their opponents.

The Elm Tree quint led the Fond du Lac players, champions of the "AA" league by scores of 13 to 7, 25 to 14 and 36 to 21 at the end of the first three playing periods.

The Bakers will meet Oshkosh C. Y. O. in a quarter-final tilt Saturday night. The Oshkosh roster includes Ed Erban, recent high school star, Cramer and Hy Duex. Kimberly will tangle with Watertown C. Y. O. at 5:45 Saturday afternoon.

APPLETON ST. MARY'S BEATEN
St. Mary's Appleton, was eliminated by St. Luke's, Two Rivers, defending champions in the tournament, by a 25 to 10 score. The Two Rivers team jumped into a 6 to 0 lead in the first period and stretched it to 12 to 2 at the half.

They were in front 18 to 7 at the third quarter and the Appleton quintet never threatened. LeClair scored four baskets while Kriziski added three and Gloe two for the winners. For the St. Mary's quintet Turn to Page 18

Boston Bruins Tie

New York — (U) — The Boston Bruins did it again.

Playing before 12,500 New York fans, they clinched the National Hockey league title last night by holding the desperate New York Rangers to a scoreless overtime tie.

And that completely blasted the chance of the New Yorkers for the title they tried so desperately to win all year. For the tie left them one point behind last year's Stanley cup winners in the standings—and their season has ended. The Bruins still have a game to play.

The Bruins, who refused to let the Rangers gain the title in spite of a new league record of 19 games without defeat, have Frankie Bruns, their smart goalie, to thank for the stand against the Rangers.

Frankie was superb as he staved off drive after drive.

The best of seven Stanley cup semi-finals between the Bruins and the Rangers will open in New York next Tuesday.

Shelf With Bad Knees

Chicago — (U) — Chicago's Blackhaws had a hockey brother act and a new center today in Doug Bentley's brother Max, but they were more interested in the physical welfare of defensemen Earl Seibert and Art Weibe.

Each had been shelved for rest knee ailments for the National league playoffs opening at Toronto Tuesday. Seibert emerged yesterday for a brief workout and got a broken nose when struck by a stray puck. Now he'll carry two injuries and a nose guard into the playoffs.

Bowler, Green Bay, Menasha Teams Also Cop At New London Meet

BY AL BRAULT
NEW LONDON—New London's own Edison, the Bowler All-Stars, Denis Sports of Green Bay and Hub Hucks of Menasha emerged the victors in the first round of New London's first annual amateur basketball tournament at the Washington High school gym last night. They will show in the quarter finals Saturday night, the first two at 7 o'clock and the second two at 8 o'clock.

The home playwood team will open tonight's tilt against Tilleda at 7 o'clock and following on the hour will be Sorensen Bakers of Appleton against Quist Insurance of Green Bay, Gold Streaks of Pond du Lac against Courtney Plumbers of Neenah, and Kimberly Merchants against Ciske Mellow Brews of Menasha. The winners will play the last two games Saturday night.

Semi-finals will be played at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and finals at 7 o'clock Sunday evening. Basketball charms and medals will be awarded to members of winning teams.

Edisons Cop, 23-21
The Edison squad piled up a 13 to 8 lead during the first half to tag to a close 23 to 21 victory over the Volvaine Oils of Neenah. They were outscored in the second half but their margin held. Bob Krause sparked the locals with four buckets and two gift shots for 10 points while D. Schmidt hooped four goals and a free throw for the Oils for 9 points. The losers were better at the free throw line.

The Bowler All-Stars had no trouble taking Tigerton 34 to 17. They held Tigerton to two free throws during the first half while they amassed 15 points. Tigerton rallied the second half but could not keep pace with the All-Stars' star forward, S. Fermanick, who sank five baskets and three charity tosses for 13 points. He was highest scorer for the evening.

A third period rally by the Denis Sports of Green Bay brought a 23 to 18 victory over the Neopit Indians. The Indians blanked the Bays 3 to 0 the first quarter and led 9 to 7 at the half but the Sports returned in the third quarter to dominate the Indians 8 to 1 and take a 15 to 10 lead. The final period was played on even terms.

The last game of the roughest as the Hub Hucks of Menasha came out ahead on free throws in a see-saw battle, 35 to 31. The losers were the Lipark Clothes of Green Bay. Twenty-nine fouls were called, 18 against Green Bay, and B. Bisch of Menasha capitalized on seven to net the most gift shots of the evening. Green Bay led 14 to 13 at the half but fell behind 25 to 26 in the third quarter and lost out at the foul line in the final stretch.

Dog Show Program Is Being Planned
Madison, Wausau and Fond du Lac Will Have Exhibitions

Developments following a recent Madison meeting indicate that Wisconsin this year will enjoy its first well rounded dog show program since state fancies and breeders began to take purebred canine activities seriously. A circuit that includes Madison, Wausau and Fond du Lac will provide dog events during the week of June 30-July 7 which are expected to attract record entries.

Seventy representatives of the Wisconsin valley, Northeastern Wisconsin, and Adger kennel clubs agreed on the following dates which have since been approved by the American Kennel Club: Wausau, June 30; Fond du Lac, July 4; Madison, July 6-7. Wausau and Fond du Lac will include the popular obedience tests and Madison a regulation spaniel field trial in connection with the all-bred bench shows.

The Madison event is said to be the first attempt to run a regulation dog show and with great interest in sporting dogs, a large entry and gate is very likely, club officers believe. Field exhibitions have been included with a few shows in the past, they said, but this will be the first time a real field trial is incorporated in such a program. Speaking of the obedience tests, Otis Hayes, Neenah, secretary of the N.E.W. group, remarked, "From the spectator angle, these tests have been to the bench show just what the forward-pass is to football; the place that puts 'omph' into the game. A circuit like this should attract the country's best performers, and galleries such as the dog folks, in Wisconsin never thought possible."

Details of the Wisconsin vacation circuit will be rounded out when officers of the three clubs meet in Stevens Point Sunday afternoon, March 17. They anticipate national publicity for the state through this effort of the combined dog groups.

SHAWANO WINS

Madison—(P)—Marshall and Shawano will play for the undisputed Wisconsin High School basketball championship in the final game of the 25th annual Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic association tournament at 9 o'clock tonight.

Shawano had an easy time defeating Platteville 34-23, and Marshall scored a spectacular last minute field goal to edge out Neenah 18-17 in the semi-finals last night. Delavan, winner over Rice Lake, 27-14, will meet Madison Central, which defeated Sturgeon Bay 32-12, for the consolation title at 8 p. m.

Jim Bauer, forward, was the Marshall field hero of the evening. With less than a minute of play remaining, Bauer stole the ball from Richard Miller, Rocket guard, who was raising his hand to call a play. He raced under the basket alone and popped in the winning goal. The game ended before Neenah could take another shot.

Shawano's fast breaking offense was too powerful for the tired Platteville club. Platteville had been forced to top speed in earlier victories over Beloit and Rhinelander.

Green Bay Signs Another Pitcher

Manager Bluege Arrives This Week: Chairs Sign 14 Pitchers

Green Bay—Another right-handed pitcher intent upon making good in organized baseball has been added to the Green Bay Class D roster with the signing of Louis Golick, Streator, Ill.

Golick, who stands two inches above six feet and weighs 175 pounds is the seventh member of the new organization to come to terms. Those signed previously are Manager Otto Bluege, Chicago, shortstop; Bill Fitzgerald, third baseman; and Leo Bohler, outfielder, both of Ottawa, Ill.; Leo Feret, Chicago, catcher; Victor (Deacon) Delmore, Tarboro, N. C., and Sylvester Manske, Sobieski, pitchers.

Reports in April
The new starboard side hurler will report here in April, primed to make a stab at a permanent position with the new Green Bay daily ball squad. He brings with him plenty of baseball experience.

In 1938 Golick chucked with Eau Claire of the Northern league, and in 1938 he was in the east, playing with Rome, N. Y., in the Canadian-American league and with Quebec in the Provincial circuit. Last year he was in semi-pro ball, pitching in the Illinois Valley league.

Set For Another Try
Golick now feels that he's ripe for another jump into the organized game, and during the winter he has been working in coal mines near Streator.

Bluege himself is due here late this week, ready to plunge into the pre-season technicalities which his position makes necessary. He has returned to his home at Chicago, but once he arrives again in Green Bay, will remain here until the season ends in September.

SIGN 14 HURLERS

Sheboygan—Manager Joe Hauser of the Sheboygan Baseball club already has a number of players signed and will have a large group here for spring training. At the present time he has the following players lined up and ready to start practice: 14 pitchers, 4 catchers, 11 outfielders, 1 first baseman besides himself, 2 second basemen, 1 third baseman and 2 shortstops.

As soon as the weather permits Hauser and his boys will be out at the ball park getting in shape for their strenuous 126-game season.

LaFayette, Ind.— Frank Zelenick, star guard on the Chicago Cardinals National Football league team, has enrolled in Purdue University and is studying for a masters degree in physical education. Zelenick, a former Oglethorpe star, will return to the Cardinals in the fall.

Tampa, Fla.—(P)—Paul Derringer has really earned his reputation for control. In the past five years he has walked only 230 men in 1,390 innings, an average of one free trip every 6.04 innings. Last year he gave only 35 walks in 301 innings, an average of one every 8.6 innings.

The chap above has just had the shock of his life. He was partially prepared for it, of course—but only about a third!

The three great virtues of Triple Test Worsteds are like triplets—you expect one, you're surprised when you get two, you're overwhelmed when you get all three. For this Hart Schaffner & Marx suit offers a rare combination of (1) Style, (2) Quality and (3) Value.

There are other suits as good-looking as Triple Test, and presumably there are other suits that will give you just about the same day-after-day, month-in-month-out service. But we've never seen any other suit with both these attributes at anything like Triple Test's price of Heating permits totaled 11, sewer inspections three, sewer permits and new sewer permits one each. The inspector made 44 plumbing inspections and 44 heating inspections.

Stolberg's dad is a tailor at Iron Mountain, Mich., and the youth also knows the trade and practices it on the Marquette campus.

McCarthy Shows No Mercy; Picks Five Yanks to Start Against N. L. All-Star Team

BY GAYLE TALBOT
AMPA, Fla.—(AP)—Marse Joe McCarthy has agreed, as a sort of compromise, to use only five or six New York Yankees in his starting line-up against the down-trodden National leaguers in the all-star game for the benefit of Finnish relief here Sunday.

Joe could, of course, have nominated the entire Yankee lineup for the benefit tussle, but the manager of the world champs bowed to public opinion to the extent of naming three members of the Boston Red Sox—tentatively—to start the titanic engagement.

Joe's choices, announced last night, include Joe Gordon, Red Rolfe, Charlie Keller, Joe DiMaggio, and Bill Dickey of the regular Yankee line-up. The three Red Sox named were Jimmy Foss, Ted Williams and Joe Cronin. The starting American league finger might be a Yankee too, Joe said. Either Red Ruffing or Lefty Gomez. Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds, who has been placed in charge of the National league forces for Sunday's game, divided his starting brigade more equitably.

Bill said he would start Morris Aronovich of the Phillies in left field, followed by Cookie Lavagetto of Brooklyn at third base, Mel Ott of the Giants in right field, John Mize of St. Louis at first base, and so on. In other words, a typical National league all-star line-up. It begins to look like they will never learn.

McKechnie would a lot rather have his own Bill Werber on third base Sunday than all the Lavagettos in Brooklyn. But McKechnie still thinks, in the naive manner of the National leaguers, that an all-star game should bring as wide a representation as possible from the clubs. McCarthy, the realist, throws in the best men at his command and wins.

Ernie Lombardi of Cincinnati will catch for the National leaguers, with Demaree of the Giants in center field, Cuccinello of Boston at second and Bill Jurgens of the Giants at short. Their starting pitcher will be either Paul Derringer or Bucky Walters of Cincinnati.

Training Camp Notes

By the Associated Press
NABIM, Calif.—Sammy Chapman appears headed for a big year with the Philadelphia Athletics. In his first look at major league pitching yesterday against the Pittsburgh Pirates he turned defeat into victory, hitting a homer with two on in the sixth, driving in two runs with a triple in the seventh and getting one of three walks in the fourteenth. The clubs meet again today.

Fort Myers, Fla.—A rumor was going the rounds today that Washington Senators would try to work out a trade with the Cleveland Indians while here for an exhibition game. The Senators are interested in catcher Frank Pytlak and pitcher Willis Hudlin, both holdouts.

Los Angeles—Manager Jimmy Dukes of the Chicago White Sox decided to mix some veterans into his pitching rotation for the Cubs today as a result of yesterday's 13-hit onslaught by the National Leaguers, mostly against rookie Orval Grove. Bill Dietrich and John Rigney were slated for duty for the Sox today with Larry Fregm and Charley Root heading the Cubs' staff.

The Cubs routed the White Sox, 14 to 7, all but one of the Cub runs coming in the first two innings as the National leaguers coupled 10 hits, including Catcher Al Todd's home run, with eight bases on balls and three wild pitches.

Most of the damage was accomplished against Orval Grove. Jess Dobner relieved him after he had pitched to nine men in the second inning.

Score by innings:
R. H. E.
Chicago (A) 013 000 300—7 12 0
Chicago (N) 580 001 008—14 14 5
Grove, Dobner (2), Eaves (6), and Tresh, Silverstri (4), W. Lee Passeau (4) and Todd, Collins (4).

Lakeland, Fla.—Camp followers of the Detroit Tigers are about sold now on Dick Bartell, the pepper-pot shortstop obtained from the Chicago Cubs in exchange for Willie Rogell.

So far Bartell has been an improvement afield and his fiery spirit has livened the club. The Tigers, going great in the Grapefruit league, had a date with the flustering St. Louis Cardinals today. The Redbirds have lost five straight.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—In a meeting made increasingly rare by the Yankees' aptitude for getting into world series play and the Giants' inability to do the same thing, the two New York clubs have a date in the Grapefruit league today. The Yanks walloped the Cincinnati Reds yesterday to run their streak of Florida victories to six straight.

Woodruff Knocks 1.5 Seconds Off Half Mile Record

Also Wipes Out John Borican's Mark for the 800 Meter Event

BY BILL KING
HANOVER, N. H.—After being denied admission to track-dom's select circle of record-breakers for five years, John Woodruff, the great Negro Olympic champion, gloated over two indoor marks today and the world hailed him as the fastest half-miler in history.

The long-striding Columbia graduate student dominated last night's third Dartmouth record-breaking carnival, whose five-event program provided eight new indoor marks, by racing 880 yards against a handicapped field in 1:47.7. That time was 1.5 seconds faster than the fastest half-mile ever run outdoors, for which England's Syd Wooderson has been awaiting official credit for two years.

While erasing the half-mile record of 1:49.8 chalked up on this track by John Borican last year, Woodruff was caught in 1:47 flat the 800-meter point. That clocking wiped out Borican's 1:49.2 record for the metric distance.

Shatter Old Record
Another Negro shattering two records in one event was New York University's Jimmy Herbert, who scratched two 27-year-old records from the indoor list when he ran 400 meters in 47.9 second and the quarter-mile in 48.4. He wiped out the marks of 49.6 seconds which have stood for both of those events since Tom Halpin of the Boston A. A. set them at Buffalo 27 years ago. Since then, however, those distances have been attempted but seldom indoors.

Borican lowered his own month-old indoor three-quarter mile mark from 3:02.6 to 3:01.2 without exerting himself greatly.

An hour's rest so revived Herbert that he anchored the New York University mile relay team into a hard-won 3:15 victory over a strong Boston A. A. quartet. The time was two-tenths of a second faster than the record that has stood for the 1600-meters as well as the mile team events since a Fordham team turned it in here last year.

Stanford, Calif.—Jim McPoland and Harold Begor ran with Herbert and they were joined by George Hazans, another Negro, to set up a new indoor mark of 1:27.7 against a Dartmouth four in a half-mile team race, bettering the old figures by 43 seconds.

San Antonio, Tex.—Robert Virgil Swift, aged 25, says the St. Louis Browns can stop worrying about the holdout of Joe Glenn, because Swift will be their No. 1 catcher this season.

Although he batted only .263 in the Texas league last year, Swift was top behind the plate. He led the league in assists and threw out 63 of 112 base-stealers.

Tampa, Fla.—Paul Derringer and his Cincinnati teammates, after failing again to stop the world champion Yankees, may get some consolation from a declaration by Charles Keller, hero of the last world series, that "Derringer was the toughest pitcher we faced all last season." Keller's bit of praise came yesterday after the bombers had blasted the Reds 5-3.

San Antonio, Tex.—Russell Van Atta, a member of the Browns' pitching staff for the last four years, has given up a battle with a stubborn sore arm and joined the voluntary retired list of the American league.

The big left-hander's arm had been troubling him for some time and he underwent an operation on his elbow in 1937, returning to pitch capable ball in 1938. His last full year, taking part in 25 games, winning 4 and losing 7. He had been used chiefly in relief roles since joining the Browns' staff.

Van Atta, 34 years old, had been in the major leagues seven years.

Canadeo Named Captain Of Chicago Gloves Team

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Chicago's Golden Gloves fighters arrived in New York today, elected a captain and launched the final stage of their preparation for the 13th annual inter-city matches, which will be held in Madison Square Garden Monday night. For their leader they chose Saviour Canadeo, the squad's welterweight champion.

The boys put so much verve into their two rounds of sparring this afternoon they satisfied Coach John Behr that they had come thru the journey from Chicago without an appreciable break in their training progress. During a spirited session in Stillman's gymnasium they showed the sharpness that had distinguished their performances in the Illinois Athletic club before they left home. They will do road work in Central park tomorrow and will follow up with three rounds of sparring, after which they will ease off as the night of the encounter nears.

He Is a Sportsman
Immediately after lunch in the New Yorker hotel the boys selected their captain.

In picking Canadeo, they chose a boy who has distinguished himself not only in boxing ability but also in sportsmanship. Last season Saviour won the Barney Ross trophy, which is put up each year by the famous fighter who was once a Golden Gloves champion himself. The award is based on sportsmanship displayed by contestants in the Golden Gloves tournament.

Canadeo has kept coming on despite repeated breaks of bad luck in previous years, a broken hand, a fractured jawbone and a cut over an eye being a few of the items which interrupted his progress in other campaigns. Canadeo showed talent as soon as he took up the sport, going to the Golden Gloves finals the first year he was boxing. That was in 1935. On that occasion he lost to Mike Gamblers of Cleveland, the bout being stopped in the second round when Saviour incurred the jaw injury.

Savior Faces Al Tribuani
Canadeo fought in the intercity matches of 1937, losing a very close decision to Richard Cremer of New York. He hopes to square accounts for that setback next Monday evening. Canadeo's opponent probably will be Al Tribuani, who holds New York's welterweight title.

Savior's home has always been in Chicago but he attended college at St. Norbert's in De Pere, Wis. He was graduated with a bachelor of science degree last month. He is interested either in following the teaching profession or going in for salesmanship.

He lives on the northwest side at 2643 North Rutherford avenue and is of Italian parentage. He is more proud of the athletic accomplishments of his brothers than of his own. One of his brothers, Tony, is captain elect of the Gonzaga university football team and another, Danny, played on Steinmetz High school's city championship baseball team last year.

Clapper Says FBI Shouldn't Have to Operate Under Cloud

Washington—There is one thing that you can't take away from J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the F.B.I. Since the Lindbergh anti-kidnaping law was passed there have been, at a recent count, 163 kidnappings. All except two of these have been solved.

There are a good many people in Washington who don't like Mr. Hoover. Around the department of justice he is considered high handed and difficult to work with. Recently he had a run-in with the civil service commission—wanted to pick his own men. His men have done good work and that is the main purpose of hiring them, so there isn't much point in being too excited about that.

God knows the government has enough inefficiency in it, chair warmers, time killers. Mr. Hoover has never been accused of inefficiency, and when you have a bureau that is getting results there ought to be some prejudice in its favor.

It is said Mr. Hoover is a publicity hunter. Well, you'd have to fire a lot of people in Washington if that is going to be a crime. Furthermore, in the kind of work the F.B.I. is doing it doesn't do any harm for the word to spread around the underworld that the G-men are good. The chances are that the enormous publicity which the F.B.I. has received has been a real crime preventive.

Mr. Hoover irritated the press in Miami recently because he would not be heckled publicly.

As to how much he worked at Miami, I don't know. He was taking some vacation and he had some agents there looking over the racketeers who infest Florida during the winter season. He didn't make any real catch there. Whether he picked up any good leads may be something else.

Explanation May Be Due In Detroit Cases
The Detroit cases, involving apparent denial of civil rights to persons arrested for having helped the Spanish loyalist cause, don't look very good, Mr. Hoover says that in making the arrests he only carried out the orders of Frank Murphy, then attorney general, and that the treatment of the prisoners while in jail was in the hands of local authorities, not the F. B. I. He may have something to explain there, and whether he can explain it to his own credit remains to be seen.

The other big complaint here now is that the F. B. I. is tapping wires all over the place, collecting dossiers on politicians and officials, as well as on private citizens, and serving as an OGPU.

Those charges ought to be investigated. Sometimes people think they are being spied on when there is nothing following them except a guilty conscience. But it is difficult for a victim to know whether his wires have been tapped, his desk rifled and his papers photostated. There are enough rumors of this

Teachers Circuit Names All-Star Basketball Teams

Spear and Daniels of Oshkosh on Southern Division Squad

MADISON—(AP)—Emmett Lowry, of River Falls, was named president, and Ray C. Johnson, of Menomonee, secretary, of the Wisconsin State Teachers College Athletic Coaches association here today.

Dates and sites of conference meets were set as follows: Track, May 25, at Milwaukee; Tennis and sort to warrant congress getting at the facts.

No Evidence of Anything Like OGPU in America
Although Mr. Murphy, when attorney general, had a slight touch of red-hunting fever after the European war broke out, there has been no visible evidence that the country is being subjected to OGPU espionage at the hands of the Hoover men.

Some 200 volunteer complaints of espionage activity come into the hands of F. B. I. agents every day. Much of this is junk and is disregarded. Thus far there is no evidence of persecution as a result of such complaints. The F. B. I. has squelched the volunteer vigilantes who wanted to take spy hunting into their own hands. I don't think many people are going around feeling that they have to look over their shoulders.

When you compare Mr. Hoover's regime with that of William J. Burns, he looks like a big improvement. If those in congress think they have something on him, they ought to have an investigation—and Mr. Hoover ought to insist on it. Such an important law-enforcement agency should not continue under the cloud of accusation that now exists.

Northern Division
First team: Darby Worman, Stout, Leo Kinney, La Crosse, and Norman Krenz, Eau Claire, forwards; Wallace Lehman, Eau Claire and Edward Rehnstrand, Superior, centers; Warner Engdahl, Superior, Marcel Nelson, River Falls, and Wayne Larson, Eau Claire, guards.

Southern Division
First team: Kenneth Buchler, Milwaukee, and Clayton Spear, Oshkosh, forwards; Clarence Daniels, Oshkosh, center; Ray Krzaska, Milwaukee, and Pete Tergynski, Stevens Point, guards.

The next meeting of the group was scheduled for Nov. 22 at Madison.

Joe Callahan, East Boston boy heading for the Hub Hive pitching staff, got a flying start towards a 1940 job when he stepped in against the Giants last September 30 and hung up a neat 3-2 victory for his first major league triumph. Pretty good for a youngster just up from the Evansville, Ind., club and great for a fellow performing his first triumph with his home town neighbors watching him work.

Burns, he looks like a big improvement. If those in congress think they have something on him, they ought to have an investigation—and Mr. Hoover ought to insist on it. Such an important law-enforcement agency should not continue under the cloud of accusation that now exists.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

STRAW-HOUSE VILLAGES
Coronado's letter to the king of Spain was written on Oct. 20, 1541, after he had spent 20 months trying to find "golden cities." He told of the great herds of buffaloes or bison on the plains west of the Mississippi, and said the Indians of the plains lived on the flesh of the big beasts.

The exact route of Coronado is not known, but the map above is marked to give a rough idea of his course.

Then he went on to give an account of other customs of these Indians. Here are some of the things he wrote:

"They have little field tents made of the hides of the cows. They live in the tents while they travel around near the cows. They have dogs which drag their tents and poles and other baggage."

"After 77 days I reached the province called Quivira, which my guides had said contained houses of stone with many stories. The houses were not of stone, but of straw. The people in them are as barbarous as all those I have seen and passed before this. They do not have cotton cloaks. They make their clothing from the cattle which they kill. They are settled on a very large river."

"The people of Quivira plant corn. They were peaceful when I came to their settlement."

"There are not more than 25 straw-house villages in this region. The natives gave me a piece of copper which an Indian chief had worn around his neck. I also obtained some little copper bells, and a bit of metal which looks like gold. I do not know where this came from, but think those who gave it to me had received it from my guides."

"The land in the province of Quivira is fat and black. It is well watered by rivers, small streams and springs. I found nuts and very good sweet grapes and mulberries."

"I am sure of this, that there is not any gold in this country."

The last words given above must have been painful for Coronado to write. After his long, hard journey, he had failed to find the riches he had been sent to obtain.

Turning back, Coronado made his way to Mexico. Many of his men had died, and he felt that the trip had been a great mistake. His later years were spent in Mexico where little honor was given to him.

Yet he had done a great thing. He had been the first leader of white men to explore a vast area in the New World. He is honored today for this work.

ABIE and SLATS

IT'S AMAZING!!
LAST NIGHT NEW YORK
WENT MAD ABOUT THAT
GIRL! TONIGHT THE AUDI-ENCE WALKED OUT
ON HER!!!

EASY TO EXPLAIN—BFF—

LAST NIGHT—SHE THOUGHT SHE REALLY
LOVED HIM! SHE PUT ALL THE LIES OF THAT LONELY YOUNG LOVE INTO HER SCENES WITH HIM! YOU SEE—SHE WASN'T ACTING!!

TONIGHT—SHE KNEW THE TRUTH ABOUT GALLANTRY—A MAN WOULD KNOW THAT HE WAS A CAD!
TONIGHT—HER ROMANTIC
SCENES WERE TERRIBLE
UNCONVINCING—SHE COULDN'T
PRETEND—SHE WAS JUST A GIRL
IN LOVE!!!

HOW LUCKY
A MAN WOULD
LOVED—BY A

OF COURSE, NOW YOU
WON'T MAKE HER THE OFFER
TO STAY IN YOUR NEW

NO—I CAN'T MAKE HER THAT OFFER—
BUT—I HAVE ANOTHER
OFFER TO MAKE HER.
PLAY THE ROLE OF
